Barrett Signs Refinery Deal

LONDON (CP) — The British Columbia government signed an agreement today with Sim-Chem Ltd., making the British-based firm the prime contractor for the province's planned $350 million oil refinery.

Premier David Barrett also announced that he has been assured by Prime Minister Harold Wilson that the British government will make loans available at attractive interest rates to give British firms "the inside track" on supplying material and technology for the refinery.

But British firms still would have to offer competitive prices and assured delivery dates to beat companies from other countries in the tenders.

Value of the Sim-Chem contract is not yet known. But James Rhodes, chairman of the province-owned British Columbia Petroleum Corp., said it would be worth more than $10 million.

Signing of the contract itself must await selection of a site for the refinery and commitments of crude oil supplies from the Alberta government, Barrett said.

A letter of intent with Sim-Chem was signed today by Rhodes and provincial Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

The signing capped a week of talks Barrett and his officials have held with British government officials and ministers, and with British and U.S. bankers.

Barrett offered few details of the proposed financing of the refinery but said he had "very good discussions with the London banking houses."

Borrowing would be at fixed interest rates, in Canadian funds.

Clinton, Merritt and Surrey were the prime site locations proposed for the refinery, which would be the province's biggest.

"We hope to be completed by 1980 — perhaps sooner," the premier said.

Sim-Chem at present is engaged in construction of a $450 million North Sea petroleum and natural gas processing installation at Teeside, in northeastern England.

Barrett said during the last 10 years the firm and its associated companies have been responsible for more than $2 billion worth of process engineering projects throughout the world.

Gandhi Allowed To Continue

NEW DELHI (AP) — A Supreme Court justice ruled today that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi can continue to head the Indian government until the full court decides her appeal of a conviction for illegal practices in her 1971 campaign for Parliament.

But the 57-year-old Mrs. Gandhi suffered a significant political setback when Justice V. R. Krishna Iyer barred her from voting in Parliament. He ruled that she could only participate in parliamentary debate as head of the government.

The ruling means that the prime minister, who along with her cabinet colleagues must belong to parliament, will not be a full-fledged member of the federal legislature.

It marked the first time in 28 years of independence that any restrictions have been imposed on an Indian prime minister and is expected to spur opposition demands for her resignation during the processing of her appeal, which is expected to take at least two months.

'All-Out Bloody War'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forest industry labor negotiations in British Columbia were at a standstill today as the third major union launched a strike vote among its members.

The Pulp Paper and Woodworkers of Canada announced they are conducting the vote among 5,500 B.C. members and Reg Ginn, their national president, warned the industry is headed into "an all-out bloody war" this summer.

Ginn said a meeting of a liaison committee of the PPWC, Canadian Paperworkers' Union and International Woodworkers of America re-affirmed a tough stand against the industry's offer of only cost-of-living wage adjustments this year.

The IWA negotiators met mediator Fred Geddes but there still was no indication if or when mediation will resume with the employers present.

No discussions at all were taking place with mediator Ken Albertini involving the pulp unions and many of the same forest companies.

Ginn said the PPWC will join the other two unions by taking strike votes starting today and finishing early in July.

The vote currently being conducted among 7,200 CPU members is scheduled for completion July 1 while the 29,000-strong coast IWA will have its counting finished Friday. The IWA contract expired at midnight June 14.

The industry-wide strike could start July 1.

'CYNICISM' ... 'TREACHERY'

All Sides Flail Turner Budget

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal budget brought down by Finance Minister John Turner which featured an immediate 10-cent a gallon gasoline price increase drew criticism from Opposition, business and labor leaders today.

Opposition spokesmen lambasted the deficit budget as "cynical" and "treacherous."

Don Montgomery, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress said the budget — especially the gas hike — is aimed directly at the working man and doesn't "come to grips with either inflation or rising unemployment."

John Poyen, president of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said exploration funds contained in the budget were "only a drop in the bucket."

The gasoline tax provided the highlights of Turner's budget which made only a few changes from his November budget, and no change from the fiscal stance taken seven months ago.

There was confusion today about when consumers should start paying the new tax on gasoline, and a finance department spokesman concluded it should be a day or two before the prices rise at most pumps.

The tax was effective at midnight Monday on gasoline sold by a manufacturer, importer or producer, according to the budget.

With the frequency of deliveries to retailers, Turner told a news conference the tax would be effective today at the pumps.

The finance department spokesman said today, however, that the retailer has not paid the new excise tax on gasoline already in his storage tank and should not raise the prices until he receives a new shipment that will include the tax.

The finance department estimated that based on existing stocks in the country, the tax-induced price increase should not reach the pumps for seven or eight days. The spokesman said however that some retailers will have to raise the prices immediately they receive new shipments.

With certain new tax revenues and some reductions in spending it is expected the new budget will produce a cash requirement of some $5.3 billion — almost exactly the current figure estimated on the November budget.

Turner also announced changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act to deal with "undesirable efforts on work incentives and recent changes in structure of the labor market."

He also announced a change in the formula for financing unemployment insurance whereby the federal government will base cover the costs of all payments — up to the average unemployment rate of the previous eight years.

Until now the government has covered costs of four per cent unemployment. It is estimated the new formula would have the federal government, this year, covering the cost of 5.3 per cent unemployment.

Turner also announced steps to curtail rapidly escalating expenditures for hospitalization and medicare.

He served formal notice that the federal government will amend its cost-sharing arrangement for hospital care, and he announced ceilings on future payments under the Medical Care Act.

The ceiling will be for a 13 per cent increase in 1976-77, 10.5 per cent in 177-78, and 8.5 per cent in 1978-79 and subsequent years.

There were a minimum of changes in personal income taxes.

However, the minister announced that the eight per cent tax credit maximum of $800 will be reduced to $500. It will affect taxpayers earning more than $27,000. A married taxpayer with two children under 16 and a salary of $35,000 would pay $228 more.

There will be an increase in the air transport tax to eight per cent from the present five per cent on Canada-U.S.

'Fuddle, Fuddle, Fuddle'

LONDON (CP) — The premier of British Columbia has called Finance Minister John Turner's budget "retrogressive, inflationary and just plain stupid."

David Barrett, in London to discuss British involvement in his government's planned oil refinery, told reporters today that Turner's budget Monday amounted to "an outrageous assault on basic health-care services."

He said the budget spending limits impose a greater burden on the wealthy provinces, which must provide for their own people as well as help pay for health costs in poorer provinces.

Barrett also criticized increased gasoline prices on grounds that most of the increase would flow to profit-rich foreign-owned oil companies.

"It's fuddle, fuddle, fuddle," he said.

Turner had labored for months preparing his budget, and "it's not even worthy of being called a mouse."

Israel Softens Conditions

Associated Press

Israel has agreed to soften some of its key conditions for a new Sinai agreement with Egypt following Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's talks with President Ford in Washington, diplomatic sources said today.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was reported in an "extremely important" meeting in Alexandria with his inner cabinet.

Sources in Jerusalem said Israel now would agree to withdraw from the western slopes of the strategic Mitla and Gidi passes in the Sinai while still retaining the eastern rises as a defence buffer against Egypt.

Israel would return the Abu Rudeis oil fields in southern Sinai and would give Egypt a land corridor to the fields rather than make them an isolated Egyptian enclave reachable only from the sea, as proposed in March, the sources said.

Edwin Newman, president of the co-op, said the purchase of the cannery from Millbanke Industries had been financed entirely by its members through normal banking channels.

UN Mission Bombed

An anonymous telephone caller, saying he was from the Young Croatian Army, later claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Fifth Avenue building across from Central Park.

Nearly all the windows of the mission and two nearby apartment houses were blown out by the explosion but no injuries were reported. Ten mission employees were asleep inside the three-storey building at the time.

Yugoslav diplomats protested in New York and Washington against what they called inadequate police protection from "a chain of terrorist attacks" against their activities in the United States.

The bomb was described as a "high yield explosive" that was "apparently put together by someone who knew what they were doing."

UIC Premiums Will Be Hiked

OTTAWA — Employees and employers will be asked to pay a larger share of unemployment insurance costs beginning in 1976, Finance Minister John Turner said in Monday's budget.

The change will mean increased premiums, to be announced at a later date.

Turner said the cost of unemployment benefits for the year begun last April 1 is expected to exceed $3.75 billion, up from the $2.3 billion last year.

Employee-employer contributions are expected to provide $2 billion but the remainder would have to come from the general taxpayer.

The measure was one of several changes to the unemployment insurance system announced in the budget which together could save nearly $100 million.

Government officials refused to disclose by how much premiums will go up as a result of the changes until legislation is presented to Parliament. Turner said the legislation will be introduced "shortly."

Other amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act will:

—Double from three to six weeks the maximum period of disqualification from benefits for people who quit their jobs without cause or who refuse suitable employment, as a means to increase incentive to work;

—Terminate payments of premiums and receipt of benefits for people 65 or over;

—Reduce the special benefit rate for low-income claimants from 75 per cent of insurable earnings to the standard rate of 66 2-3 per cent for single persons;

—Extend the period of benefits for those suffering temporary disability or on special training courses;

—Allow receipt of the maximum 15 weeks of sickness benefits at any time in the first 25 weeks on claim instead of the first 15 weeks as provided at present.

Ottawa Paring Medicare Funds

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government served notice on the provinces Monday that it will drastically limit its share of payments to meet increased medicare costs beginning next year and will terminate its existing hospital insurance agreements in five years.

Hospital and medical care payments cost the federal government $6 billion this year, up nearly 20 per cent from last year.

The announcement by Finance Minister John Turner in his budget follows numerous warnings about increasing costs for the programs shared by federal and provincial governments.

Turner said the government will limit the increase in its net contributions to provincial medical aid programs to 13 per cent next year, 10.5 per cent in 1977-78 and 8.5 per cent thereafter.

While Ottawa and the provinces have been talking for several years about changing hospital insurance arrangements, the government's announcement of ceilings on increased medicare contributions to the provinces was not expected.

The federal government appeared to be telling the provinces that if they can't keep medicare costs down, they will have to foot more and more of the bill for the rising costs.

Turner said both programs, under which the federal government pays up to 50 per cent of provincial health and hospital costs meeting set minimum requirements, have long since met their basic objective of providing comprehensive health care.

Turner said the net ceiling next year of 13 per cent in growth of federal medical-aid contributions likely will reach 14.5 per cent when natural population increase is taken into account.

With an added population growth factor of 1.5 per cent, the gross ceilings would be reduced to a 12-per-cent increase in two years and 10 per cent by 1978, he said.

Horrified Says Pollen

Victoria Mayor Peter Pllen said the 10-cent-a-gallon increase in the price of gasoline is one of the worst features of what is probably "the most horrifying budget I have ever seen in the light of the needs of municipalities, the province and the country as a whole."

"Really, it is in my opinion the thrashings of an exhausted mind to cry about inflation and yet hit the average working man right between the eyes," he added.

The irony is, he said, that the gas increase is intended to finance "runaway subsidies" for the stabilization of imported petroleum product prices in eastern Canada.

"We in western Canada are being virtually colonized or exploited to keep the prices of these products in the east the same as they are in western Canada," Pollen said.

Yet the policy ignores the fact that the James Bay hydro-electric project in Quebec will provide perpetual energy at a reasonably low price, while western Canada's supply of energy from hydrocarbons is being steadily depleted.

Pollen said the only way to balance this situation would be to make the eastern energy from hydro-electric sources available on a national grid system.

He said Turner's budget is a disincentive to housing development, and he particularly criticized the failure to renew the capital cost allowance for new apartment construction after it runs out at the end of the year.

Deprived of this long-term stimulus, developers are ignoring apartment construction and concentrating on condominiums — to the point where Victoria now has an excess one-year supply of condominiums "sitting in a pool."

"There's no rent freeze to worry about either. They (developers) can flog the things and run," he added.

Saanich Mayor Ed lum is also highly critical of the budget, stating Turner would have done better not to have brought one in at all at this time.

"The budget doesn't do anything very much except tax the small man a little more," Lum said, "It won't help the economy of the country, it doesn't help the area it should be helping."

Lum said the budget was aimed at helping large corporations.

"It's of some use to larger companies," Lum observed, "The budget was planned for the benefit of Alberta, as far as I can see."

Lum expressed disappointment that the budget does not make housing a top priority.

"Housing should have been a top priority," he asserted, "but there's nothing there to really help. There's no incentive to solve the housing crisis, which is particularly bad in the west."

★ FLIGHT TAX SLAMMED

TORONTO (CP)—Travel agents said the $10 tax imposed by the government on flights from Canada to foreign countries other than the United States is one of the heaviest of its kind in the world.

"With the exception of Israel, I can't think of any country in the world that imposes a tax this high," travel agent Hal Burns said.

Residents of Israel have to pay an air travel tax of $100 to fly out of the country.

Who Really Needs a Budget, Anyway...

By PAT CARNEY

(Miss Carney is a former financial writer with the Vancouver Sun and now a business consultant.)

OTTAWA — One wonders, in the hot haze of an Ottawa summer, why John Turner bothered to bring down this budget at all.

He did not need a budget in order to announce his long-expected increases in oil and gas prices.

Nor did he require a budget to bring relief to Ontario and B.C. wine producers, or, hohum, to give five years' notice of intent to change the hospital insurance program.

It is hard to justify a budget to announce that the government will discontinue the sale of Capital Government of Canada annuities, which are purchased, against expert advice, by 40 odd people per year.

Or, yawn, to declare personal income tax increases of up to $250 per year for Canadians earning $25,000 or more.

The major rationale for a June budget is to take active measures against the forces of recession and inflation which are ravaging Canadians' earning and spending power.

But Finance Minister John Turner is clearly not prepared to do much about either inflation or recession at this time, despite his concern about emerging cost trends in the Canadian economy.

Faced with the prospects of zero growth in the economy, deteriorating terms of trade, and an unparalleled budget deficit, he is apparently leaving the decision to adopt wage and price restraints up to Canadians as a whole.

In Monday's budget, he said government would "create the climate and set the example" by implementing a five-point program of government spending cuts.

It is up to business and labor, he implied, to follow the government's example.

He rejected prices and income control on the grounds that the public would not yet support such action.

He adopted government spending constraints after labor and business indicated that the government should not ask for restraints in the private sector unless it was prepared to impose them in the public sector.

Yet the government's actions are largely illusory. The overall increases in the prices of oil and gas are expected to add about 1.5 points to the Consumer Price Index adding to inflation.

The $1 billion expenditure cuts are almost balanced by injection of funds into housing and employment programs.

Government departments and agencies have been told to cut $130 million from their programs this year.

However, Canadians won't know where or when the axe will fall on government spending until the budget debate, or until decisions by the Treasury Board are announced.

Ironically, Treasury Board president Jean Cretien is expected to elaborate on the cuts, which include travel allowances — on his return from Japan.

In many cases, government spending will simply be delayed. For instance, Crown agencies such as Petro-Canada will be affected by the $350 million reduction in non-budgetary items.

However, Petro-Canada's commitment in the Syncrude project will be met and start-up expenses will be incurred this year. The savings will come by deferring the agency's exploration program.

Similarly, some of the alleged expenditure constraints will come from putting off planned increases in government spending, not by cutting existing programs.

For instance, Ottawa will save between $30 and $60 million by not hiring all the additional civil servants originally planned this year.

Turner has adopted concrete proposals to beef up employment which would otherwise lag as the recession bottoms out and the slow recovery begins.

The emphasis of the employment creation programs is to provide jobs and training for the unskilled and the young, reflecting changing patterns in the labor market.

He also channelled badly-needed funds into housing, and introduced an attractive investment incentive in the form of his proposed temporary tax credit.

On the question of inflation, he did nothing much at all. Early in his budget speech, he said: "We are now faced with a dilemma. If we follow more expansionary policies at this time, we run the risk of making inflation worse. If, on the other hand, we follow contractionary policies we risk worsening unemployment."

Further, expansionary measures are inappropriate, since much of the slack in the economy is in our export industries and we cannot stimulate demand in the economies of our trading partners, he explained.

"On the other hand, since unemployment is already too high I do not see any justification for weakening the expansionary thrust which is already in place."

As the overworked waitress in the parliamentary restaurant said: "Whoever heard of a budget in June anyway."

LAST CHANCE to guzzle gas at cheaper prices was taken up by streams of city motorists converging on fuel outlets — especially self-serve stations. Gas jockey Jeff Day of Victoria Tire, 1623 Hillside, said at one stage Monday night it was 45 minutes before he could cart a wad of bills to the till. Today? "Nobody," he said. "Everybody's filled up."

Gas Hike Bypasses Most Of B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Consumers in most of British Columbia will not be affected by the increase in the price of natural gas announced in the federal budget.

Gas consumers served by B.C. Hydro, Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd. and Pacific Northern Gas Ltd. will be unaffected by the budget move because almost all of the gas they receive is produced within B.C. and therefore is not subject to federal regulation, which affects only interprovincial traffic.

Andrew. Thompson, chairman of the B.C. Energy Commission, said some Alberta gas is blended into supplies reaching these companies but the volume is so small it will probably be disregarded.

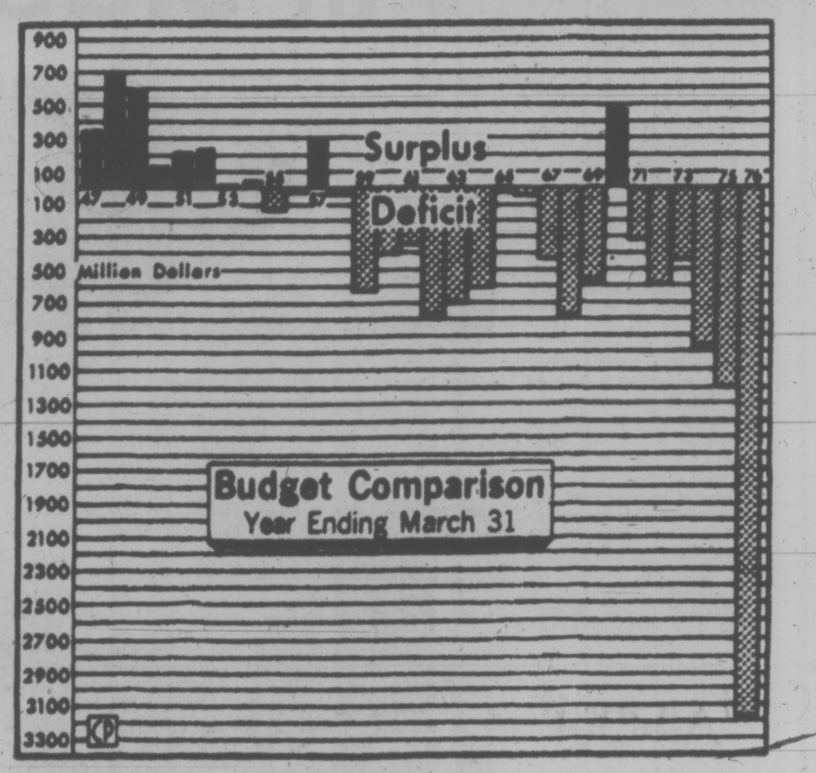
However, he said the federal government's pricing move will affect the East Kootenay area which is served from Alberta by Columbia Natural Gas Ltd.

Thompson said that because the budget mentions the price increase in terms of gas delivered to Ontario it is difficult to know what field price increases will be demanded of consumers in that small area of southeastern B.C.

"It may be that prices there go up 25 per cent over those prevailing in the Lower Mainland," he said. "The prices industrial customers of Columbia Natural Gas pay are already higher than elsewhere in the province and help may be needed.

"One possibility is that a subsidy might be introduced to help equalize gas rates throughout the province."

Thompson said the only other extra-provincial gas used in B.C. comes from a field straddling the border between the Yukon and the Northwest Territories.



Year-by-year the deficit deepens

Start Saving Receipts

OTTAWA (CP) — Commercial users of gasoline can expect to start collecting their refund on the new 10-cent-a-gallon excise tax on gasoline in August, a revenue department spokesman said today.

The excise tax, imposed by Monday's federal budget to take effect today, basically applies only to personal use of gasoline. However, everyone must pay the tax at the pumps.

The tax will be rebated for gasoline used for business or commercial purposes, farming, and commercial fishing, hunting and trapping. Use of gasoline by all federal, provincial and municipal vehicles is also exempt.

The spokesman said special forms for the rebate will be prepared and available by August. Business users of gasoline should start collecting receipts today that show the name of vendor, name of purchaser and the number of gallons bought.

The rebate will amount to 10 cents for every gallon rather than the actual cost of the fuel.

HIGHLIGHTS OF BUDGET

● Gasoline prices boosted by 10 cents a gallon immediately due to a special tax. Gasoline goes up another 5 cents in July or August to cover a 23 per cent increase in the crude oil price.

● Home heating oil costs to rise by more than 13 per cent next winter, natural gas by more than 24 per cent.

● Personal income tax increased slightly for individuals earning about $500 a week or more, but rates otherwise unchanged.

● Outlays on housing programs increased by less than 10 per cent, with stress on subsidized construction.

● Taxation of natural resources companies to be reduced to stimulate petroleum exploration.

● Growth in federal health-care spending to be curbed in stages.

● Air-fare tax increased for international runs.

● Government spending and lending increased by almost $4 billion to more than $31 billion and cash deficit projected at about $5 billion, up from $1.5 billion.

● New building and machinery costs in goods-producing businesses to qualify for special 5-per-cent tax credit.

● Unemployment insurance premiums to increase for both employees and employers while benefits are tightened.

● Government spending and growth of public service to be restrained.

Extra Cost for Forces

OTTAWA (CP) — The new price of crude oil announced in Finance Minister John Turner's budget Monday night is going to add millions of dollars to the cost of operating the armed forces.

A defence spokesman said today the armed forces anticipate using 205 million gallons of liquid fuel of various types this fiscal year to operate ships, planes and land vehicles and to heat buildings.

He said he had no indication of just what that would mean in terms of dollars. The budget said the increase is equivalent to about five cents a gallon on the wholesale price across a range of products. On that basis, the forces would pay about $10.2 million more a year.

Speech Summary Available

A booklet summary of Monday night's federal budget speech can be obtained free from the office of Revenue Canada Taxation, 1415 Vancouver Street in Victoria.

The office said a small number of booklets are available to the public upon request.

Fixed-Income People Feel Pinch

The federal budget is bad news for the thousands of Victorians living on fixed incomes, Victoria Chamber of Commerce executive vice-president Alan Emery said today.

"We are disappointed to see the government does not plan any real restraint in its spending. This is an inflationary budget and this will hurt everyone, particularly those on fixed incomes," he said.

"The government is obviously going to print money to pay for its programs. It is spending money it hasn't got and this is inflationary."

Emery said he agreed that fixed wage and price controls could not be brbught in at this time without curing the underlying causes of inflation.

Wages and prices would only come under control when the federal government showed more leadership on cooling off the economy.

Emery said Ottawa proposals for housing were also disappointing.

There was some assistance to low income groups but nothing to help the mass of people to buy homes.

The federal government could have helped by making funds available for assembling land in B.C. The lack of serviced land is the main roadblock preventing the average family from getting a home.

Measures to conserve gasoline and natural gas will also be inflationary, Emery said.

Raising the price of gasoline 15 cents and home furnace oil 5 cents a gallon will add to the cost of living for everyone, including those on fixed incomes, he said.

All Sides Lambaste Turner's June Budget

flights, and to $10 from $5 on flights to other countries.

The remaining five per cent sales tax on insulation materials, including double pane glass, storm windows and storm doors, is being removed.

Turner said it has been demonstrated that saving of 20 to 40 per cent on heating costs can be achieved through proper insulation.

The excise tax on wine will be returned to its pre-1974 level, as a result of protests to the increase contained in the November budget. The reduction could lower domestic wine prices five to 10 cents a bottle.

Selective steps were taken to spur housign construction and business investment.

Turner announced that $1 billion commitment to Central Mortgage an dHousing Corporation will be increased by $200 million to permit increased lending to limited dividend housing projects, new home buyers under the Assisted Home Ownership Program and to provincial and other non-profit housing agencies.

In promising that federal spending would be reduced Turner said spending reductions and postponements would affect almost all government departments.

Turner affirmed a restriction on government salary budgets which officials said would pare $30 to $60 million from the expected federal payroll.

He warned that the firmer government attitude may lead to more work stoppages but said the resulting inconvenience to the public will have to be accepted.

Turner also announced adjustments in the controversial resource taxation field, increasing the effective federal rate from 25 to 34 percent but providing more generous exploration write-off opportunities to the extent that federal revenues are expected to decline by $40 million a year through 1980.

"While many of the particular economy measures will prove to be very painful, I am convinced that the package as a whole will be welcomed by the country at large," Turner said in tabling his new budget.

The budget forecast a national deficit of $3.7 billion on total spending of $35.8 billion in the 1975-76 fiscal year.

The previous year's deficit was $635 million on total spending of $30.7 billion.

Opposition leader Robert Stanfield and Ed Broadbent, parliamentary leader of the New Democratic Party, said spending cuts announced by Finance Minister Turner will have little, if any, effect in controlling inflation.

The whole austerity program is simply "an exercise in cynicism," Stanfield said. Even with $1 billion slashed from federal spending, the government is sinking more deeply into debt.

Further, measures to curtail federal participation in provincially-run hospital and medical plans smacked of "treachery the likes of which I have never seen before," he said.

Broadbent denounced the program as "typically Liberal" response which shifts the emphasis from government to private spending.

"The government is merely transferring money from public spending to private corporate give-aways," he said.

Stanfield said the government acted unfairly in imposing hospital and medical programs on the provinces during the last 20 years and then unilaterally announcing plans to pull out of the agreements.

Under the agreements the federal government pays up to 50 per cent of approved medical and hospital insurance costs. The total health bill is expected to exceed $6 billion this year. Ottawa's share of $3.1 billion is close to 20 per cent higher than last year.

Broadbent said proposed tightening of unemployment insurance programs will transfer heavy costs from the government to the users.

Reaction by provincial leaders to Finance Minister Turner's budget ranged from approval by Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed to condemnation by Saskatchewan premier Allan Blakeney.

Taking the Bus Will Really Be Cheaper Now

OTTAWA (CP) — Questions you might be asking about Monday's federal budget:

Q—What's it going to cost me?

A—Ten cents a gallon more for auto gasoline today and an additional five cents a gallon by early August. The 10-cent increase is a special excise tax on gasoline "for personal use." The other five cents results from $1.50-a-barrel increase in crude oil price to $8 effective July 1. Government has asked industry not to pass this to consumers until present supplies are used up in about 45 days.

Diesel and aviation fuel are exempted. The average motorist using regular gasoline will pay $100 more a year.

Q— Will it be cheaper to use the bus?

A—The idea is to get you to use anything else — bus, bicycle, horse, even feet — as an alternative to gas. It will be cheaper to use the bus, probably, although bus companies using gasoline will be hit by the five-cent increase July 1.

The 10-cent increase won't apply to commercial users — buses, taxis, truckers, farmers, fishermen, service vehicles. Government vehicles, federal, provincial and municipal, also are exempt.

Q—What about home heating?

A—Heating oil will be up five cents a gallon as a result of the July 1 rise is crude prices.

If you use natural gas, it's going to cost more to heat your home and office. The city-gate price in Toronto for Alberta gas will rise to $1.25 for 1,000 cubic feet from the current 82 cents, effective Nov. 1. That will add 43 cents a 1,000 cubic feet to your bill.

This might be a good time to insulate your home. Aside from saving on heat, the budget exempts all home insulation materials — including storm doors and windows — from the five-per-cent sales tax.

Q—What about income taxes?

A—Up, if you're making $25,365 or more a year — and then by only a maximum $250 in 1975.

Q—Are there no decreases in taxes?

A—Last November's special excise tax on wine is dropped, saving you about 3.5 cents a bottle if the provincial liquor stores pass this on. There are other tax decreases that will affect you indirectly, but perhaps in an important way.

Q—What about wages?

A—Mr. Turner says wages and salaries have been rising faster than those in the U.S., where a severe recession already has been cutting into Canadian exports of automotive and building products. If the trend continues, he says, the result will be greater unemployment. So he asks moderation in wage increases in coming months.

Q—What's he going to do about it?

A—He says he's putting a $1-billion brake on federal spending that may have some "painful" effects, including another year of public service wage disputes.

"The government is not prepared to grant increases that are unwarranted by any reasonable standard," he says. This may lead to legal work stoppages. The resulting inconvenience to the public will have to be accepted."

He's also going to try to check the amount being spent on health,, unemployment insurance and other programs.

Q—Health?

A—Hospital and medical-care insurance costs to the federal government will total about $6 billion this year, a rise of nearly 20 per cent. He'll put a 13-per-cent ceiling on medical care increases in 1976-77, 10.5 the next year, and 8.5 after that. He has also given the provinces the legally-required five years' notice of plans to amend the Hospital Insurance Act. The message to hospitals and the medical profession is to introduce less costly alternatives.

The medical care changes will "discourage unnecessary use of services" but won't stand in the way of needed health care.

Q—What about unemployment insurance?

A—Premiums for you and your employer will go up and benefits will be tightened. He didn't say how much premiums will rise but if you're fired for misconduct, quit without good reason, or won't take a suitable job, you won't be able to claim benefits for six weeks instead of the present three.

Persons over 65 won't be able to claim unemployment insurance, except for a three-week lump sum. They are going to be freed from paying unemployment insurance premiums at age 65 if they continue to work.

The idea is to cut the amount the government must pay out, which Turner says will be $1.75 billion this year — all raised in taxes.

Another motive for tightening unemployment benefits is that "some features of the system have undesirable effects on work incentives" — a polite way of saying many workers have preferred unemployment insurance to an unpleasant job.

Q—Is he doing anything about the scarcity of jobs?

A—He says $285 million will be allotted to the local initiatives program (LIP) in the next two years, $35 million to on-the-job industrial training and $35 million to occupational training in educational institutions, $60 million for student summer jobs in 1976, and $25 million on federal projects in areas where unemployment is severe.

A 20% Increase In AHOP Building

A 20 per cent increase in housing construction for low income groups is expected in British Columbia as a result of an extra $200 million pumped into the program by the federal government.

The funds are administered by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation through the Assisted Home Ownership Program.

Lloyd Skuce, information director for the B.C. regional office, said the corporation is confident that all of the additional funds will be spent in both Victoria and Vancouver.

He said both cities had no difficulty spending their 1974 allotments.

However, the funds probably would only go into row housing and condominium construction in the two major urban centres because of the high cost of single family homes.

In smaller centres, where land costs are cheaper, some of the funds would go into new single family homes.

Under the federal program, low income groups receive subsidies toward mortgage payments. The money is used to construct new housing.

In Victoria, the program has run into roadblocks this year because of the shortage of serviced land available for construction and because of the high price for lots.

The additional $200 million for the program was greeted critically by a number of associations.

Rod McKenzie, president of the Vancouver branch of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, said the housing proposals would have "no impact whatsoever in B.C."

He said a 20 per cent increase in condominiums and single family homes through the program would still be far short of the needs in B.C.

He estimated the $200 million would provide funds for 5,000 new units across Canada while B.C. needed about 25,000 new units.

Vancouver alderman Mike Harcourt, chairman of the Vancouver council housing committee, said the changes would not help Vancouver very much. He said the federal government had failed to come to grips with the housing problem in a meaningful way.

Bill Lindsay, president of the Greater Vancouver Real Estate Board, said most of the extra $200 million under the AHOP program would not help Vancouver because of the high real estate costs in that city, putting most new accommodation out of the reach of low income groups.

Jack Poole, president of Daon Developments Ltd., said he finds the housing provisions "kind of underwhelming."

He said Finance Minister John Turner appeared "stuck on the horns of a dilemma — he didn't know what to do, so he did nothing."

PETRO-CAN PLANS NIPPED IN THE BUD

OTTAWA (CP) — Budget for a proposed national oil company fell victim to government spending austerity even before it came into existence.

A bill intended to set up Petro Canada still is winding its way through the Commons, but the federal budget brought down Monday night slashes its spending power.

Finance department officials say expenditures under the new Crown corporation this year will be limited to investment in Syncrude Canada Ltd., a joint venture with private oil companies in developing the Alberta oil sands.

Aside from that investment the company will have only "minor expenditures" in order to set up its corporate structure.

Finance officials indicated there will be no spending this year on exploration and development of new oil reserves.

Earlier this month, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said he hoped to have the corporation set up by the end of the summer and work started on exploration.

The Bonanza Wasn't There

It's Great Politics —VSE Chief

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Sherwood, chairman of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, described Finance Minister Turner's Monday budget as "a great political document — but it's inflationary."

Sherwood said he was disappointed that the budget contained no remedies for government policies which discourage saving and investment.

Tax reduction for resources companies is a positive step although government plans will have to be studied more closely to determine if they offer enough incentive for increased exploration in Canada, he said.

Other members of the financial community questioned attempts by government to cut costs.

Positive features in the budget seen by Trevor Pilley, president of the Bank of B.C., were the easing in resource industry taxation, elimination of the withholding tax on bond interest and the apparent intention to hold down government spending.

J. A. Hepburn, research director at Odlum Brown and T. B. Read Ltd., described the budget as "basically neutral."

"I feel it's appropriate because it doesn't tamper too much with forces already at work in our economy. A lot of negative measures that might have been introduced did not appear," he said.

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's oil industry was looking for a bonanza in Monday night's federal budget, but it wasn't there.

Increased natural gas prices, with moderate reductions in resource industry taxes, should encourage gas exploration in Alberta, but beyond that provincial business leaders did not anticipate Finance Minister Turner's budget having great impact on Alberta's economy.

The 10-cent-a-gallon federal tax increase on gasoline is going to pinch the pocket-book of both the pleasure driver and the family man and Edmonton Chamber of Commerce executives also fear it may dampen Alberta's car-oriented tourist industry.

Edge King, Edmonton chamber president, said attempting to refund the gasoline tax to commercial operators, farmers and transportation companies, as specified in the budget, was going to create an administrative nightmare.

King also voiced disappointment in the proposed federal deficit which, he said, would have to be inflationary in spite of Mr. Turner's tough talk about restricting government spending.

A. H. Mitchell, an Edmonton oilman and the chamber's resources advisor, said the announced oil price increase will not be enough to spur oil exploration in view of the high taxes which continue to restrain the oil industry.

"A $1.50 increase will be acceptable, but it is not what we had hoped for," Mitchell said.

"I don't think it will do much for stimulating exploration for oil."

Shortfall: A Record $4.97B

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Turner is forecasting a record $4.97-billion shortfall between what the government will take in during the current fiscal year ending next March 31 and what it must spend and lend.

This is more than triple the $1.56-billion deficit the government ran up last year.

The budget shows planned expenditures of $28.9 billion this year, up from $26 billion last year. Revenues are expected to rise to $25.73 billion from $24.86 billion.

This leaves a total forecast deficit on budget transactions of $3.17 billion this year, compared with $1.15 billion in the year ended March 31.

But after allowing for loans, investments and advances by the government to its agencies, and for preliminary foreign-exchange transactions, the total forecast shortfall for this year is $4.97 billion.

Radical Cure For Economic Ills Rejected

By GLENN SOMERVILLE

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner has spurned any radical shifts of budget policies or attempts at direct restraint of pay rates and prices to combat economic ills.

Instead, he told the Commons in his budget speech Monday night, "I have decided to stay on our existing fiscal course" set seven months ago — a course aimed at moderate stimulation of the economy.

And he rejected any program of direct or indirect controls over pay rates that he says threaten to set off a new bout of inflation by adding to production costs.

He has also abandoned attempts at winning agreement to voluntary restraints, for the time being.

The finance minister's main budget initiative is a pledge to reduce government spending by $1 billion from what it otherwise might have been. He says he hopes that move will serve as an example to others.

Turner told a news conference following his 90-minute speech that there will be no further attempts to establish a program of voluntary pay and price restraints — after nine months of vain effort — unless business and labor ask for it.

In fact, he conceded he has run through and rejected the options he outlined publicly last month — compulsory controls, voluntary restraints or stringent tax-and-spending measures to curb inflation-making pay increases.

But he said the special anti-inflation secretariat set up earlier this year, during attempts to win acceptance of voluntary restraints, will be retained in case of a delayed response from business and labor.

Recent reports indicated the secretariat had been cut to the bare nucleus needed to keep it operational.

The government had considered statutory controls but Turner emphasized they were rejected, not as a matter of principle but because the costs can only be met if there is widespread public support for such a plan.

"As I have said before, I believe that we can resort to direct controls only when there is a public conviction of the need for such action," he said.

"That point has not been reached."

Turner said earleir this year that if no voluntary program of price and wage moderation is reached, he would have no option but to bring in mandatory controls or a severely restrictive budget.

But Monday he rejected both options.

Instead, he said the government flatly rejects a restrictive policy "of deligerately creating, by severe measures of fiscal and monetary restraint, whatever level of unemployment is required to bring inflation to an abrupt halt."

There are already more than 700,000 jobless and the unemployment rate in May was 7.1 per cent of the labor force.

The government would use its tax and spending powers to set the climate for restraint and is prepared to get tough with civil servants if necessary, he said.

Salary budgets were being trimmed and the rate of increase reduced in public-service hiring.

Turner emphasized pay increases that are "unwarranted by any reasonable standard" will not be granted. This might lead to public service strikes "and the resulting inconvenience to the public will have to be accepted."

The hard line on civil service hiring and pay raises comes after members of Parliament voted themselves a 33-per-cent pay raise.

By holding back the rate of increase in hiring for civil service jobs, the government will save between $30 and $60 million a year, finance department officials estimated.

No Exploration Spur Seen In Resource Tax Changes

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Petroleum Association dismissed changes in resource taxation announced Monday night as "a token," saying they will do little to encourage new exploration.

Association president John Poyen said the $40 million in additional funds put back in the hands of the companies is "only a drop in the bucket" compared with needed exploration spending.

He said he could not estimate offhand how much more money in total the oil companies would need to step up their exploration efforts.

Last fall the federal government softened its tax bite to give the companies $100 million more, followed within a few weeks by a drop in Alberta royalities of $130 million.

Poyen agreed that the $270 million total with the latest federal change "is a significant number if we get it all in the same year, but I don't know if we will."

Under changes in the budget, the government increased the corporate tax rate for oil and mining companies to 36 per cent from 25 per cent. But at the same time, it introduced a new resource allowance, permitting the companies to write off 25 per cent of their production income.

Net result, the government says, is to reduce the companies share of $1 of exploration spending to 39 cents from 54 cents, the remainder of the cost being written off in taxes.

Poyen said he is confident that the Alberta government will further reduce its royalities to put even more funds back in the hands of the industry.

"I'm confident Alberta has some adjustments in mind that will add substantially to the industry take," he said.

After taking the new resource allowance into account, the companies will get about 28 per cent of the new $8 a barrel price for crude oil, Poyen said.

He estimated they need about 35 per cent to boost exploration efforts.

In Vancouver, Bill Hamilton, president of the Employers' council of British Columbia, said the budget "is basically neutral, an exercise in futility and frustration."

Despite attempts to curtail government expenditures and hiring, the inflationary bias remains about as it was in last November's budget, he said.

Hamilton said the national accounts deficit is projected as being $3.7 billion dollars, "but almost all of this represents a decrease in revenues."

"The major portion of this shortfall in anticipated revenues, $1.6 billion, reflects the rapidly deteriorating position of corporations as this amount was to be corporation taxes paid on profits,

"This is a clear signal to labor that industry simply cannot afford to pay the exorbitant demands currently being presented."

Meanwhile, D. G. McGill, president of the Vancouver Board of Trade, said finance minister Turner "apparently feels expansionary thrusts of the economy are already at work and for this reason has taken a rather neutral and non-dramatic stance."

BUDGET SPEECH tucked underneath his arm, Finance Minister John Turner accompanied by Prime Minister Trudeau enters the Commons for his speech Monday.

Charities Come Under Scrutiny

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation tightening federal control over the more than 35,500 registered charities in the country is being considered by the finance department.

A green paper tabled in the Commons Monday by Finance Minister John Turner proposed rules to ensure that charities are not used as tax dodges and that more money flows from them into charitable works.

Main targets of the proposals are the large, closely-controlled family or corporation charities that can be used under existing law either to hide income from normal income taxes or to pay large amounts to their board members for little work.

Also hit would be charities that run exorbitantly expensive fund-raising campaigns.

The object of the proposals is said by officials not to be to alter significantly the work of the many charitable organizations now active in the fields of education, medicine, scientific research, culture, religion and athletics.

Forest Industry Heads Mainly Disappointed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Spokesmen for the British Columbia forest industry were generally disappointed with the federal government's budget Monday.

George Currie, chairman of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., said "I don't really know why he (Finance Minister John Turner) brought the budget down."

"What is really distressing is that we were looking to the government for leadership on restraint.

"In addition, we thought he might have provided some strong incentives for investment and some aid with the problems of dealing with inflation in accounting."

Currie said he feels the budget is a reflection of Turner's position in the cabinet.

"He hasn't been able to move the government out of the way and let private industry make investments which will create jobs," he said.

"He hasn't given the financial and political leadership he had raised hopes for."

Ron Gross, president of Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., said he is disappointed at the government's inability to further hold the line on federal spending.

"What we need is to expand the private sector," Gross said.

Norman Dusting, executive vice-president of the Council of Forest Industries of B.C., said additional housing money in the budget is "welcome and necessary, but whether this will do the trick in helping get the housing program back to schedule remains to be seen."

No Value on Time

OTTAWA (CP) — People performing volunteer work for political parties will not be able to put a value on their time and claim tax deductions under changes to the Income Tax Act introduced Monday with the federal budget.

A finance department official said only money contributions would be allowable deductions.

Other changes to the act tighten up bookkeeping procedures in accounting for political contributions.

Limits to political contributions were brought in last August with passage of the Election Expenses Act.

More Moans Over Pay Boosts

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister John Turner stood firm Monday night on his position that recent high wage settlements may price Canadian goods out of export markets.

He produced statistics that showed pay increases to domestic workers are higher than those in the United States.

In his budget address he said labor-cost increases per unit of output have been only moderately higher here than in the U.S. because productivity here has declined less.

But he said that when the U.S. pulls out of its present recession, the Americans are likely to experience a greater improvement in productivity.

"Under those circumstances, the gap between our unit labor costs and those in the United States will progressively widen and our competitive position progressively deteriorate."

Turner said he can understand why, in view of recent inflation, workers want to keep up. But recent wage increases have fully restored lost buying power, he added.

"A number of recent wage and salary demands appear to bear little relationship to economic reality."

Wages had built serious cost increases into the economy that threatened to erode the competitive position of Canadian industry both at home and abroad.

Tables included with the budget indicated that percentage increases in Canadian wages have been rising faster than those to American workers.

Nanaimo Sit-In Frustrates

Frustration and uncertainty continue for department of Indian Affairs (DIA) staff as Indian occupation of the Nanaimo DIA office enters its fifth week.

"It's the most frustrating thing I've ever experienced," said Bill Cook, DIA supervisor for South Island District, in an interview Monday from his Nanaimo home.

The frustration is not just with the Indians, who have yet to sit down with DIA staff and spell out what changes they want, Cook said.

"Our department's a little bit out of touch too," he said.

Deputy Indian Affairs Minister Arthur Krueger said last week in Ottawa that a decision can be expected soon on permanent closure of DIA offices in Nanaimo and Bella Coola.

He said the department has decided to close both the Williams Lake and Vernon offices.

Krueger's statement came as a surprise to staff in the DIA regional office in Vancouver.

A staff member said he knew the Vernon and Kamloops offices were being closed, but understood that bands in the Williams Lake district hadn't yet taken a majority vote asking that the office be closed.

Wherever there have been Indian sit-ins of DIA offices, Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan has telegraphed chiefs in the district asking that bands be polled to see if a majority favor closure of the office.

Cook said he hopes no quick decision will be made to close the Nanaimo office based on "some of the emotional issues."

He said he wants to make sure Indians in the 19-band South Island Tribal Federation served by the Nanaimo office understand fully what services will be lost if the office closes permanently.

Otherwise the department will be faced with the prospect of re-opening the office in six months or a year's time, he said.

"Nobody's thought these things through," Cook said.

He said he's expected to get a resolution from the chiefs asking that the office be closed, but he hasn't even got that.

From his efforts to determine what Indians in the area want from DIA, all he's concluded is "it appears that most bands want some services."

Cook said the Nanaimo sit-in is being manned by about five people, all from one family group.

He said many people are hoping today's meeting between Indian leaders and provincial cabinet ministers on cut-off lands will end the deadlock and get some open discussion going.

WIDE-EYED Samora Machel is welcomed at airport en route to palace

Portugal Yields Power To Mozambique Ruler

Times News Services

LOURENCO MARQUES, Mozambique — Portuguese Prime Minister Vaso Goncalves flew to Mozambique today to hand over the former colony to black rulers bent on building a socialist state for its nine million inhabitants.

Goncalves was accompanied by Foreign Minister Melo Antunes, Socalist leader and cabinet minister Mario Soares, and Communist party chief Alvaro Cunhal.

The Portuguese leaders led diplomats from scores of nations who flew to Mozambique to witness the midnight ceremony of independence and the installation of Samora Machel as president.

With the roar of "Viva, Frelimo" ringing in his ears, Machel returned to Lourenco Marques Monday after an absence of 12 years from the capital, where he once worked as a male nurse.

Machel has been making a triumphant advance southwards down Mozambique since May 24, addressing mass rallies in the provincial capitals. Monday was the climax of his re-entry.

Machel travelled from the airport in a motorcade of almost 30 cars and was given a tumultous reception all along the route into the city.

On his arrival he went immediately to the Red Point Palace, official residence of Mozambique's governors general since 1895.

At least 100,000 black and white Moxambicans lined the processional route from the airport to the city. Early Monday bus loads of Frelimo (Front for the Liberation of Mozambique) supporters carrying flags and singing freedom songs had started to converge on the airport.

Machel's second in command, Marcelino dos Santos, was the first to arrive at the airport, in a twin-engine Cessna aircraft. He arrived at the airport 20 minutes later in a Hawker Siddley 748 aircraft — a gift from Zambian president Kenneth Kaunda.

Painted in bold letters along the length of the aircraft were the words "Peoples Forces for the Liberation of Mozambique."

Also at the airport to welcome Machel was the prime minister of the transitional Frelimo government, Joaquim Chissano.

First Talks On Cut-off Lands

The first formal meeting between native Indians and the provincial government on the cut-off lands issue was spent in "fruitful general discussion," Human Resources Minister Norm Levi said today.

Some 20 representatives of native Indians including delegates from the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs met a cabinet committee all morning at the legislature. Considerations broke off for lunch and were scheduled to continue during the afternoon.

The minister's only comment was that general discussion took place.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

AMIN NOTE SENT TO QUEEN

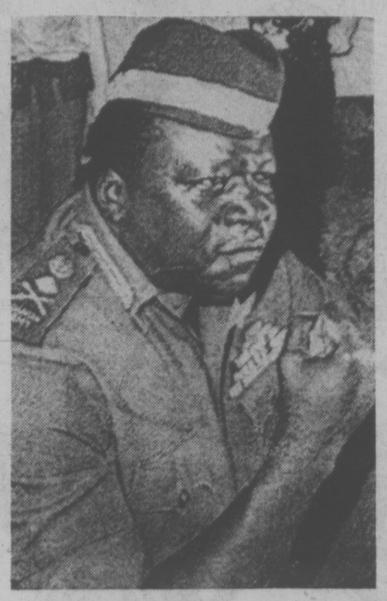
United Press International

Two British army officers sent to Uganda to appeal for the life of a British lecturer returned to London today carrying a sealed letter for Queen Elizabeth from Ugandan President Idi Amin.

There was no indication what the letter contained. Amin Monday set a July 4 execution date for Dennis Hills, 61, despite a personal appeal for clemency from the Queen.

Lt. Gen. Sir Chandos Blair told newsmen at Heathrow airport, "I've returned to London with a letter from the president of Uganda. The sealed letter is in my bag. I've not seen it. There is also a copy which is to be taken to the Prime Minister."

Blair, accompanied by Major Iain Grahame, said he knew "roughly" what the letter contained but said any statement must come from Prime Minister Harold Wilson or Foreign Secretary James Callaghan.



Amin clenches fist for press

Amin has demanded Callaghan fly to Uganda for face-to-face talks on clemency for the ailing Hills, sentenced to death for referring to Amin in an unpublished manuscript as "a village tyrant."

Callaghan has said he would fly to Uganda if Amin agreed to spare Hills, who is reportedly suffering from cancer.

Amin, who has turned the on-again, off-again execution of Hills into an international incident, has also hinted he may hold the British community in Uganda hostage in the confrontation with his nation's colonial ruler.

"Britons are being closely watched already and are regarded as spies," Amin said in a broadcast Monday over Radio Uganda.

He warned that if Britain made any wrong move, it "would place the British community in Uganda in trouble." The 700-member British community there includes settlers, businessmen, diplomats and missionaries.

B.C. Police Head Elected

Philip Jamieson, a detective constable on the fraud squad and nine-year Saanich policeman, has been elected president of the British Columbia Federation of Peace Officers.

Jamieson, 29, said he went to the federation's annual convention not even expecting to be nominated. But his name was put up for president by another Saanich delegate and he defeated incumbent Constable Frazer MacDonald of Esquimalt.

Jamieson, who is president of the Saanich police association, said the convention fully endorsed the previously announced position on capital punishment voiced by the Canadian Police Association.

He said delegates voted to make a presentation to Parliament on capital punishment but declined comment on whether any resolutions were passed on possible police union action to support the position.

Other officers elected include two from Greater Victoria as well as a former Victoria resident.

They are Robert Wood of Delta, first vice-president; Grant Churchill of West Vancouver, second vice-president; Michael Flynn of Vancouver, secretary-treasurer, and trustees Denis Lush of Saanich, Garth Fowler of Oak Bay and John Catterall of Vancouver, the former Victorian.

Indians Block 4 Carloads

MOUNT CURRIE (CP) — Indians manning a roadblock of Lillooet Lake road about 125 miles north of Vancouver, turned back a convoy of four-wheel-drive vehicles Sunday.

Chief Allan Stager of the Mount Currie band said four carloads of men drove from Harrison to Lillooet Lake via a back road. He said they brandished shotguns at the blockade, which is near the site of a five-day First People's Conference.

An estimated 800 persons are attending the conference in a meadow on reserve land and must pass through the roadblock, manned by members of the American Indian Movement, to enter and leave the campground.

Cpl. G. W. Gibbs of the Pemberton RCMP says the trip to the lake is a favorite outing by owners of four-wheel-drive vehicles, who usually travel in convoy.

PERUVIAN WINTER KILLS

LIMA (UP—) — A cold wave sweeping the Andes mountains of Peru has frozen dozens of children and adults to death and frozen parts of Lake Titicaca, the two-mile-high lake on Bolivian border.

Official registers in the central Sierra city of Huancayo report the deaths of at least 160 persons since June 1. Normally a sunny start-of-winter month in the Andes, June, this year had night-time temperatures of 10 and 20 degrees.

'Status Quo' Kept In Labor Code Bill

Labor Minister Bill King introduced changes to "maintain the status quo" in labor code legislation Monday in the wake of protests by the trade union movement.

King met representatives of the B.C. Labor Federation for one hour Monday afternoon to discuss changes, and although the labor minister said the federation seemed pleased, secretary-treasurer Len Guy repeatedly refused comment on the success of the meeting.

The provincial government, said King, will proceed with debate of the Labor Code Amendment Bill and the latest amendments this week.

Most significant change, he said, is the deletion of a section that would have limited trade union raiding periods to the seventh and eight months during the second year of a two-year contract.

"It was deleted mainly because it wasn't welcomed by any of the trade union organizations," said King, adding it was initially introduced to try and minimize effect of raiding on new contract negotiations.

King said, "We will be returning to the status quo."

One section in the government's legislation, criticized by the federation and the Victoria Labor Council as paving the way to an open-shop policy in the province, was not deleted however.

The measure prohibits a union from asking for disciplinary action against a member who joins another trade union within the same plant.

Two new amendments "will maintain the status quo," said King.

In response to criticism from both the federation and the Employers Council of B.C., amendments delete a section which would have authorized the labor relations board to vary collective agreements.

The proposed powers of an arbitration board have also been amended to provide that the board conduct its investigation and make its recommendations "under terms of the collective agreements."

King said that the relations board retains the authority to look at the intent of collective agreements with respect to seniority rights.

Two additional sections, criticized by the trade union movement were retained, however, said King.

The minister, in the interests of maintaining industrial peace, may direct the labor relations board to consider whether a council of trade unions would be an appropriate bargaining agent for a unit.

King said he retained the section, but does not expect to use it unless he's "backed up against the wall."

"There are some problems the trade union movement has to come to grips with and that's the problem of small unions tying up the whole industry."

Later in Burnaby, he said that he would have more sympathy with labor organizations if they would spend more time organizing workers who don't have union representation.

"If the trade unionists would get off their butts and try to organize the 65 per cent of the people in this province not organized, I'd have a lot more sympathy for trade unions," King said as he faced questions at a meeting attended by about 8 persons.

Esquimalt Townhouse Quashed

Esquimalt council has decided free waterfront land isn't worth a 22-unit townhouse development in the 800-block Selkirk.

The Concord Credits Ltd. proposal — debated for 1½ years — will be scrapped after the proposal failed to obtain the necessary 5-2 vote Monday night.

The proposal would have included the gift to the municipality of about half an acre of land on 1,100 feet of waterfront.

Aldermen voting against the proposal were Conrad Lundgren, Larry Mann and Jim McEvay who maintained the density would be too high for the area.

"This was to be the start of a public promenade on the Gorge," said Ald. Ken Hill. "If we let this go, that'll be it forever."

"I'm convinced that it's worth it," said Mayor Art Young.

But Ald. Larry Mann, elected last year on his opposition to the development, said: "It's not a black and white case of waterfront land or not. I don't think we have to sell our soul for land people won't have access to."

The land would have been accessible only from the water.

Planning committee members can still meet with Concord for further negotiations, but committee chairman Lundgren said there was no reason to do so.

Concord representatives have said the development proposal will not be pared down further. Originally for 71 units, it was cut to 30 and then 22. Six duplexes will now be built there, according to company project manager Rommel Loof.

According to Mann, subdivision of the land for duplexes will ensure the public waterfront access.

No land-use contract will be needed for the subdivision was was needed for the proposed townhouses.

Self-Serve Limits Seen

Self-serve gas stations will be limited in Esquimalt, council decided Monday night.

Aldermen instructed solicitor Terry O'Grady to draw up a bylaw creating separate zoning for self-serve and full-service stations.

There was no indication how severely self-serves will be restricted.

The move came after council's zoning and planning committee heard the Automotive Retailers' Association complain about the trend toward self-serves.

capital scene

The Victoria Ex-service Women's branch No. 182, Royal Canadian Legion, will meet Thursday, June 26, at 7:45 p.m., at Christ Church Cathedral Memorial Hall, Vancouver at Quadra Sts. An election of officers will be held.

The Esquimalt Golden Age Club will meet Wednesday, June 25, at 1:30 p.m., at the Esquimalt Recreation Centre, 527 Fraser St.

An Unsatisfactory Budget

There may be a few grim chuckles today at the fact that the tariffs on imported prayer books and hoops of wood for repairing barrels have been abolished by Finance Minister John Turner in his latest budget. Before the ravages of inflation and unemployment have run their course in this country, more than a few Canadians will have resorted to praying for an economic miracle, and in the meantime wearing the clothing of the cartoonist's poor man.

They are about the only laughs provided in Turner's grim document. It is a curious compilation of contradictions. On the one hand, the finance minister admits his November budget seriously misjudged the future of the Canadian economy.

He predicted four per cent growth, while in fact there has been no growth at all. Things have gotten demonstrably worse since November. The recession in the U.S. now is worse than most economists were forecasting. Recent wage and salary demands in Canada "appear to bear little relationship to economic reality," as Turner noted.

Yet what policies does he propose to deal with the worsened situation? They amount to a little bit here, and a little bit there, some fine tuning and tinkering, but they're not going to land a glove on the twin evils of inflation and unemployment about which the federal government professes to be so concerned.

For example, the finance minister admits that "residential construction has been the major domestic source of weakness in the economy." Yet the only stimulants Turner has prescribed for Canada's sick housing industry are a $200 million increase in Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. lending authority — not all of which will be spent in 1975 — and $125 million increased building subsides. These are hardly sufficient.

His employment stimulus — $450 million in various job-creating programs over two years, most of it to a new winter-works style LIP plan — likewise are peanuts in relation to the problem, which is almost 800,000 jobless. Turner himself says the money will provide jobs for probably no more than 40,000 people during the two years.

Turner speaks eloquently of the "grievous damage to the fabric of society" done by inflation and the "grave uncertainty ... deep frustration, social tension and mistrust of private and public institutions" it engenders, but his energy proposals alone guarantee an inflationary upward jerk of two percentage points.

Some restraint in wage bargaining by labor unions may help the economy and cool off inflation, but the energy package — a 10-cent-a-gallon excise tax on gasoline, a further five-cent-a-gallon increase as a result of higher crude prices, and the natural gas hike for eastern domestic users — will wipe out any gains. Fishermen and farmers, mining and construction and commercial transport will be exempted from the excise tax on gas, but what of the ordinary working stiff who drives to work? He is clearly being discriminated against.

The finance minister also says the government is pulling up its socks and setting an example of restraint. But even with his target of $1 billion in spending cuts, Turner is still budgeting for expenditures of $35.8 billion, a 16 per cent increase, with a whopping deficit of almost $4 billion.

Clearly, Canadians were expecting something more than this stand-pat, do nothing budget. Like Mr. Micawber, the finance minister keeps hoping something will turn up to save himself, the economy and us from inflation and unemployment. The government is afraid to take the hard decisions.

With all of the talk from Turner and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau in recent months of the dire need for restraint and giving up short term gains for the long term good of the economy, we were expecting some serious effort on the part of the government to deal with the problems such as wage and price controls, or taxing away excessive individual and corporate incomes.

Canadians were ready to accept some kind of limit on annual wage increase in return for a guarantee that prices and profits would also be kept in check. People were ready to co-operate, in the knowledge that sacrifices were being made more or less equally by all sectors. But instead of leadership, all they got from this budget was a collective shrug and the admonition: "Don't look at us."

ROB BULL

Quebecers Mistrust Leaders

MONTREAL — As the organized crime inquiry winds up its current public hearings, one group of people will gradually be working their way back to a normal routine.

That group is the thousands of Quebecers who have made a habit of switching on their radio or television to catch day after day a glimpse of clerks, businessmen and civil servants talking in local accents about local people who at one time or another have defrauded nearly everybody in the province.

The crime inquiry did not have the drama or political tensions of the Cliche inquiry into construction industry union violence. It dealt with white-collar crime in the meat business which is a nasty, petty affair concerned not so much with power as with money.

But in a way, because it was on television and radio every day, it had a much more diffuse and emotional response, particularly in a province so justly proud of its fine cuisine.

'Eat Meat'

There was the spate of black humor which inevitably arose, the insertion of the phrase "eat meat" into the local vocabulary of swear words, and the discovery of situations fraught with irony. An example is the case of the specialist butcher shop which knew it was buying meat which had not been judged fit for human consumption but did not realize it was buying horse meat unfit for human consumption.

It was unsophisticated television. At times the sound quality was bad. The camera work was not of the high quality seen in television commercials. There were long lags where nothing much seemed to happen and there were cuts when the three commissioners had decided that something should be struck from the record.

It was effective, however, in its primary purpose of alerting the public to a problem that their leaders had apparently been aware of for at least eight years but had been unable to cope with.

The inquiry dealt only in passing with the threat to public health. Its mandate was to deal with crime. Fraud is a criminal act. But the scores of people who participated in this organized activity made money by endangering their customers.

Bad meat improperly cooked can cause food poisoning which in the case of the very young, old or infirm, can kill. Some diseases which kill animals can, if the meat is not properly treated, be passed on to humans.

The vast majority of honest meat packers and fast food companies were affected by the crime inquiry revelations. Meat sales dropped dramatically and several restaurants took out advertisements to say that their meat was either federally inspected or purchased from reputable wholesalers.

ROBERT BOURASSA
. . . much to answer for

Then the other shoe dropped and we found out that some people had access to federal guarantee seals which they were putting on their product when federal inspectors were not around.

The problem was not restricted to Quebec. It also had ramifications in Ontario and affected three layers of government.

The fact that the normal processes of law and the host of regulations had been unable to stop this particularly nauseating practice was used to justify putting men in front of a television camera and forcing them to testify against themselves.

As a result people, with reason, are even more mistrustful of their governments here than they were before. It is a powerful gut reaction.

Premier Robert Bourassa has said that this government deserves credit for using special inquiries to deal with embarrassing situations. He is probably right as far as that goes.

It is an old Canadian practice that when a government cannot make up its mind on how to deal with a problem it holds a special inquiry.

But this inquiry, like the Cliche inquiry, showed that the government had much to answer for. Supervisors did not keep an eye on corrupt subordinates. Different jurisdictions refused to co-operate fully with each other. Government communications were revealed to be astonishingly bad. After it was announced, for example, that the Ontario government had expressed its suspicions on the subject to the Quebec government, Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette announced that the Quebec Provincial Police had not been informed.

Then a federal inspector said that the RCMP had passed on these suspicions and other information to the QPP at a meeting held some years ago. Choquette appears to be badly advised.

Criminal Acts

Now as a result of the extraordinarily public nature of these hearings, people here are aware of the failure of government to assume its responsibility. The Cliche report similarly laid much of the blame for the violence and criminal acts in the provincial construction industry on the Quebec administration.

When the premier failed to accept the central conclusions of the Cliche report, which recommended abolition of union hiring halls and the installation of a system of job security, when he kept in public service those high officials whom the inquiry indicated were unfit for their duties, there were charges of government collusion, from a former royal commissioner, among others.

On the face of the evidence in the Cliche report these charges are hard for Bourassa to refute. People have been educated by the premiers' special inquiries not to give blind trust to their government.

When Judge Jean Dutil hands down his report on fraud in the meat business next September there will be even greater pressure on the premier to follow through. If he does not he will be damaging further not only his own government's future but that of other levels of authority as well.

MAURICE WESTERN

Minister Defending Piracy?

OTTAWA — The current activities of Gerard Pelletier are not easily reconciled with his public image. Usually a rather quiet figure in the House of Commons, the minister of communications has appeared up to the present much more interested in cultural pronouncements and Canada's bilingual destiny than in the swash-buckling activities which appeal to some members.

It seems rather odd, therefore, that Pelletier should now claim the limelight as the resolute friend and defender of television pirates. One would think that there were, even in the present cabinet, men more temperamentally suited for such a role. Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, for example, or perhaps Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey, if he was not so fully engaged at the moment in the restoration of law and order in his post office domain.

Pelletier, however, answers — if anyone does — for the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, chaired by Pierre Juneau, which looks on international piracy as a wholesome pursuit, beneficial to Canadian entrepreneurs and necessary for the maintenance of our threatened identity. With the CRTC's encouragement, one cable station in southern Ontario has deleted American commercials while calmly appropriating American programs.

Pelletier and Juneau — allies in television nationalism.

One of the problems with piracy is that it does tend to be regarded by the victims as an immoral activity. Certain Buffalo, N.Y., stations, in addition to instituting law suits, have threatened to jam their northward transmissions.

In a letter to a Conservative MP, Pelletier scoffs at such threats to Canadian enterprise. His arguments are varied. Jamming may not be technically feasible. It might interfere with reception in Buffalo. It would be immoral, violating various international agreements. In any case, our government has a further weapon in Bill C-58, which will remove the tax-deductible status of expenditures by Canadian firms for advertising across the border.

Pelletier offers the mild advice to Americans that they will simply have to cut their prices in an effort to hold as much Canadian advertising as they can. How this will help if the CRTC continues to encourage piracy is not immediately apparent.

At first glance, cash seems to have a good deal more to do with the Pelletier-Juneau policy than either patriotism or morals. There is certainly very little to indicate that Canadian nationalism is gravely threatened in the area which has been exposed to the corrupting influence of U.S. commercials, which are not readily distinguishable in many instances from the presumably purer products emanating from Canadian situations.

There are other difficulties. While Pelletier struggles to save us from the Americans, his Quebec colleague, Jean-Paul L'Allier, is struggling to save Quebec television from Ottawa, Pelletier and Juneau, and us. It is remarkable that the minister, in battle on two fronts, can concentrate as well as he does. It is uncertain, however, in view of L'Allier's plans, that he is concentrating on the most endangered front.

The struggle for Toronto or more accurately for advertising revenues might have more to commend it if we did not have a number of other current disputes with our American neighbours. It is wise to be selective where possible. Would it not be sensible, for example, to concentrate rather more on the very real threat to our waters posed by the Garrison project (an irrigation project in the north-central U.S. which threatens Manitoba farmers) and less on the threat of commercials engaging the attention of suspiciously self-interested groups?

As anyone who has ever listened to a Canadian minister of external affairs must surely be aware, our policies are free of the imperfections which, regrettably, mar those of too many other states, the great powers included. Being utterly disinterested (and currently short of fuel), we abhor gunboat diplomacy while pursuing conciliation, upholding morality, selling CANDU reactors, helping the neighbours and standing four-square for international law. Even when we abstain on moral issues, we do so for virtuous reasons and in the most respectable company.

It is possible, given our whiter-than-white record, that the Americans can be persuaded to overlook a bit of program pirating, especially when it carries the approval of our cultural custodians. On the other hand, it seems a rather unfair burden to impose on external affairs. Pelletier is persuaded that the U.S. Federal Communications Commission will be unreceptive to protests from the Buffalo stations. Even if this confidence is well based, there remains the problem of U.S. senators and representatives, who are known in Ottawa as an unreliable lot.

While the thought may seem unpatriotic and culturally subversive, it has been suggested in times past that the United States has a markedly greater capacity to affect our interests than we have to affect American interests. Pelletier may feel that there ought to be a place for one swash-buckler in so large a federal cabinet. On the other hand, we might be better served if he concerned himself a little less with aid and comfort to piratical enterprise and more with the jurisdictional ambitions of L'Allier which constitute an undoubted challenge to his inherited authority as minsiter of communications.

Consent Not Given

The Indian land claims are a vital issue to every B.C. Indian. The Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs has our full co-operation on the land claims settlement, not closing Indian offices. And we as Indians do not condone any violence, we buried our hatchets 100 years ago. The 19 tribes of the Southern Tribal Federation have not given their consent to the Tribal Federation to close the department of Indian affairs offices. The entire scheme was the executive's, the entire intent is to become power-leaders. In this organization, their policies are not fully understood by people at the grassroots. Administration has always gone to the chosen few, and the leaders have the pick of the crop.

We Indians on the other side of the fence can accomplish nothing by threatening the senior government. If this is our policy then we most certainly have lost all our cultural teachings. Negotiate!

I don't believe we are selling out. Up until a week ago these very people were banking big pay cheques from the senior government. Why has this same money turned dirty?

It would also be in our interest if the federal government would call an investigation of the administration of funds, policies, and how the federation's constitution is enforced, certainly not by the majority of the 19 bands. Some bands are never notified of its meetings, let alone elections. The electors bring their voting power.

And last but not least, the qualifications of these people are more than questionable. As administrators, they simply do not qualify, nor have they any academic standing to back up their authority for administrative jobs to handle the wide range of problems the Indian peoples face. — A Very Concerned Indian.

Thanks to All

On the afternoon of Sunday, June 8, I was involved in a car accident on the West Saanich Road.

I would like, through the medium of your paper, to thank all the wonderful people who came to our rescue.

I would also like everyone to know how very considerate and understanding the two Saanich police constables were. They went out of their way to be helpful. — Eleanor Hassell, 2766 Murray Drive.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of June 24, 1915

"I have made up my mind to stick to vaudeville. Shakespeare and the old dramas have passed. Musical comedy has had its day. The question is, what does the public want? Personally I feel safer under the protection of vaudeville than anything else, as it has a little of everything else—grand opera, acrobatics, musical comedy, dancing, minstrels —at a price which is in the reach of everyone." This is the pronouncement of veteran actor George Primrose, whose minstrels are appearing this week at the Pantages theatre. He first came to Victoria in 1879, when even then he was a well-known minstrel. "In those days Victoria was considered quite a big town. Vancouver and Tacoma had not yet been thought of. Seattle was a hamlet of two streets."

The Cyprus Legacy: 180,000 Refugees

By STEVEN V. ROBERTS

Greek Cypriot refugee women rest in shade on British air base

NICOSIA — The savage little war on Cyprus left about 180,000 Greek Cypriotes homeless. Since then, their days have been filled with the emptiness of waiting and endless disappointment. They harbor a fierce dream, to go back home. But the ethnic Turks say they cannot live peacefully with Greeks, and refuse to allow them back. On an island full of devilish difficulties the refugees present one of the more difficult, and more important, to resolve.

One of them, Christos Alexandrou, sat in front of his tent, a dark stubble staining his cheeks. During the fighting here last summer he was captured by Turkish troops, and after his release several months later, he found his way to a refugee camp outside the southern town of Larnaca.

"There is no work, I've tried, but I can't find anything," said the 25-year-old construction worker, whose family is still behind Turkish lines. "We don't know what to do with ourselves, we have no interest in anything . . . In the village we had enough money for a decent living, but here we don't even have enough for cigarettes."

About 70,000 people, one-third of the Greek-Cypriote work force, lack jobs. Th government has tried various schemes to revive the economy: guaranteed loans for businessmen, special funds for construction, public works. One economist said it could take 40 years to absorb the refugees and restore the Cypriote living standard to pre-war levels.

Government planners are caught in a trap. If they help the refugees too much, they risk giving the impression that they accept the status quo. If they do not help enough, they risk rising discontent and leftist influence.

As a result, the government has been forced to take wasteful half-measures. Enough money is being spent on tent camps to finance permanent low-cost housing. An unused airstrip was renovated when Nicosia airport closed, but not enough to handle long-range jets or big cargo planes.

The difficulty is aggravated by uncertainty. Why build a new factory if you might go back to the old one? Why plant a crop if the Turks might attack again and capture the whole island?

More than 140,000 ethnic Greeks are still living on government food and a meager monthly allowance: $11.20 for the family head, half that for each member. The handouts keep them alive, but for people who have enjoyed a decade of prosperity, the dole only emphasizes their deprivation.

"The main feeling you have is that you are lost in the whole world," noted Dr. Phidias Paraskevaides, a Member of Parliament whose district is under Turkish control. "No job, no roof that is yours to stay under."

Nicolas Loizou, a refugee living in an abandoned Turkish house in Larnaca, added: "When you know you've had something, and now you don't have it, you feel very angry."

Moderates on the Greek side, including Glafcos Clerides, the Greek-Cypriote negotiator, and Constantine Caramanlis, the Greek Prime Minister, believe that a solution is essential, and are ready to accept Turkish demands for a separate state under a federal system. In return, they want the Turks to give back some territory, and to allow a sizable number of ethnic Greeks to live in the Turkish state. They hope at least half of the refugees would return home.

For the present even this sort of compromise is unacceptable to the Turkish side, which is enjoying the exhilaration of triumph and seems increasingly reluctant to give back anything. Moreover, the Turkish military is afraid that if any Greeks return to the Turkish zone, they could be used as a seedbed for guerrilla warfare. In Cyprus no one forgets — and does not trust his opponent to forget, either.

Compromise is also rejected by the hard-line Greeks, including President Archbishop Makarios. Any feasible solution would be a defeat for the Archbishop, and he seems to prefer a "long struggle" of international propaganda and pressure to undermine the Turkish position. That is fine with extremists who relish the chance to destroy the moderates.

Many analysts feel that Athens and Ankara will eventually have to settle the issue. Mr. Caramanlis would like to reach a solution quickly, and turn his attention to Greece's pressing domestic needs, but if he compromises too much he opens himself to savage left-wing criticism. After six months of stalemate, Turkey has finally formed a government under Suleyman Demirel, but like Mr. Caramanlis, he cannot go too far without evoking cries of betrayal from his leftist opponents and reactionary coalition partners. Nor does Mr. Demirel have the power to stand up to the army, the final arbiter of Turkey's political life.

The Greek and Turkish political leaders met in Brussels last weekend and agreed to talk further about their problems, but a Cyprus settlement seems no closer. When Mr. Clerides and Rauf Denktash, the Turkish-Cypriot leader, resumed negotiations in Vienna on Thursday, they voiced the same suspicions and rigidities that have poisoned their talks from the beginning.

In public, at least, most refugees share the hardline approach and agree with Dr. Paraskevaides when he says: "I will insist for my lifetime on the right to return to my house and land and village. If I don't struggle it would be a crime against my conscience."

But others agree with Mr. Alexandrou when he says: "If the Turks ask for something reasonable we should give it to them. Then we can all get back to a normal life."

THE LOSS OF CANDOR

By DOUGLAS FISHER

The American ambassador to Canada, William Porter, has told us in blunt vernacular that "Canada is a big boy now." The corollary is that we should not plead special relationships or whine when the U.S. gives us tit for any nationalistic tat on our part which hurts the Americans.

One example the ambassador gave as our own business, not the Americans', is the big money being given by General Motors (U.S.) to the Liberal and Conserative parties.

Ambassador Porter, a permanent official rather than a political appointee from the usual affluent supporters of the president, is clearly a firm, tough, plain-speaking representative. It's too early to tell if his appointment and stance since he arrived represents a high-level determination in Washington to put relationships with Canada on a harsher or more arm's-length basis than they have been.

What continues, of course, is our vicarious but deep immersion in following closely American politics and power. For many of us this has an allied assumption that we know and understand Americans, their ideals and systems, better than anybody else.

It seems to me that in the past year — and to our advantage — a major stereotype of the U.S. held by many Canadians has been shattered.

The American dream, with the prospect that each one of us might share it, has gone. It has always been an attractive, often practical, option for us, as the past migration figures show. Further, American models in almost every field of endeavor have lured us since the time of William Lyon Mackenzie. There has been a fetish here for American heroes and methods — for example, the Canadian idolatry for FDR and Jack Kennedy.

Johnson and Nixon have blown most of this away. Since the latter's resignation, we might be described as swimming along in our own nationalistic seas, the current of British Empire and Commonwealth feeling long ebbed away and the fierce American undertow slackened to a little drift.

It would be a pity if we are long detached from following and analyzing critically, the American political scene. If, as I sense, we are on a nationalistic bent, with tinges of both isolationism and grandiosity to it, we may well miss lessons which the best in America are drawing from the epic disaster of a presidential resignation (a vice-presidential one, too), an embarrasing military defeat in Southeast Asia and a major economic defeat. The latter is simply the emergence of the OPEC alliance and the supercession of the American oil titans at the controls of petroleum power.

I. F. Stone, in a recent issue of the New York Review of Books, is more shrill than usual in conviction that Ford is "unmistakably vintage Nixon, that he's just as dedicated to proving that America is not a pitiful helpless giant" (as Nixon once asserted).

Jonathan Schell, in a series now running in the New Yorker, traces how one of the aims of the original U.S. intervention in Vietnam gradually overshadowed all others. This aim was to protect something that the policymakers called American "credibility". This was nothing tangible.

It was "image", a blow-up of what the Orientals used to call "face". In time the credibility aim came to mean avoiding a humiliating defeat. A variety of bizarre lies, subterfuges and unconstitutional measures were used to conceal and postpone the literally awful truth.

★

There's not much our government can do if this obsession with credibility and its associated dearth of candor and surfeit of grand posturing has been transferred from the Nixon to the Ford administrations. We may pray that Americans themselves, especially in congress, will harry and cut such a transfer.

What we should search out and destroy is the emergence of anything like this credibility fixation in our own leaders. It's not an unmentionable.

Our prime minister thinks it petty to bother about distinctions between his governing and partisan functions. The minister of finance dithers with vague chatter about voluntary restraints because he declared that firmer controls were unacceptable a year ago. Being big boys should mean that we can acknowledge mistakes and jettison past stances.

Another Blow to Battered Image of the Doctors

By CHARLES FOLEY

SAN FRANCISCO — When a one-year-old boy broke his arm in a fall at his home in a small town north of San Francisco, his anguished mother rushed him by car to the nearest hospital. "They wouldn't do anything," she said later. "I had to take my little boy — in great pain — all the way to San Francisco, where he finally got treated hours later at the U.S. Public Health Hospital. Refusing to mend a child's broken arm — what sort of way is that to win the public's support?"

Waiting Weeks

Doctors admit that such things happened during the strike by California physicians protesting against soaring malpractice insurance. And behind these isolated incidents is a backlog of hundreds of untreated cases — sick people facing "non-critical but necessary" surgery who have been waiting for weeks to reach the operating room. Some — including one elderly cancer patient who began haemorrhaging in the hospital corridors as doctors debated the urgency of her case — became "emergency patients" as they waited.

Whatever else may result from this state's health-care crisis, one thing is clear: the already battered image of the American medical profession has suffered a further blow. Public disenchantment, which began years ago when physicians stopped making house calls, is cresting today in a wave of public disillusion and anger.

Californian politicians are finding that their mail is running five to one against the striking doctors. ("I always wondered if doctors really cared," said one letter-writer. "Now I know — they care when their pocketbook is attacked.") Don Burns, a member of Governor Edmund Brown's cabinet and a key figure in the health reform drive, says: "Hostility is growing towards doctors, and personally I think their behavior is outrageous. A lot of innocent people are being hurt by the walkout."

Patients were not the only people affected. Several thousand hospital workers were laid off while hospitals lost hundreds of thousands of dollars a day. Some, faced with rows of empty beds, talked of bankruptcy.

The fiercest criticism of all has come from lawyers, who are blamed for encouraging "frivolous" malpractice litigation by taking cases on a contingency basis — taking one-third, or even one-half of the total settlement awarded to a successful plaintiff, nothing if the case is lost.

The president of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, Robert Cartwright, calls the doctors' walkout "a mockery of the Hippocratic oath" and a "cruel, callous subterfuge." Study after study, he says, has shown that "the cause of the medical malpractice crisis is malpractice on the part of doctors. Yet the medical profession, ostrich-like, refuses to put its house in order and come up with a responsible solution for preventive injury control."

'Sell Their Yachts'

What the luckless patient sees in all this is the two wealthiest professions in the U.S. battling over who will get most of his money. So the hospitals cannot keep these $800-a-week rooms filled? Too bad. Let them lower their rates, so that they will be closer to the prices charged by a luxury hotel. The poor underpaid doctors cannot afford the monstrous premiums set by the giant, greedy insurance companies? Well, they can always sell their yachts and their Cadillacs. As for the lawyers, they would go into politics, of course, should loss of their fat contingency fees put them out of business; just as the politicians would return to the law if thrown out by their constituents for failing to solve the health-care mess.

Doctors are upset, needless to say, by this public indifference to their woes: they thought the strike would win the public sympathy but attention focussed on medical "dereliction of duty" rather than the oppressive premiums. More and more people have begun to wonder if all those malpractice suits are really, as doctors like to claim, "brought not for true malfeasance, but for medical accidents," and at the urging of greedy lawyers. Were not physicians seeking greater immunity for their acts of negligence than anyone else?

Court awards were certainly large, but the cases reported in the press were also often very alarming. A young Olympic swimmer was blinded by hospital treatment which led to ulceration of the eyes. A widow in her twenties watched her husband die in convulsions after a wrongly administered spinal injection. Doctors were accused of forming a cabal to protect their own by refusing to testify against colleagues. As one lawyer put it: "The popular feeling grew that if we weren't taking suits on a contingency basis, very few would be brought, since the medical profession has traditionally refused to police itself. Many dangerously incompetent doctors would be practising today had they not been exposed by attorneys working with the incentive of a contingency contract."

Unneeded Surgery

Another cause of resentment against doctors in recent years is the widespread belief, right or wrong, that they overcharge patients for surgery that is often unnecessary. Some physicians earn as much as $200,000 a year, and according to the American Medical Association, 40 per cent of all doctors in the U. S. make more than $50,000.

"People hear that I net $70,000 a year," complains a Los Angeles anaesthetist. "And they think I have no problems." In fact, I pay 20 per cent of my income on insurance alone, and insurers want to up that by 140 per cent in the next few weeks." With surgeons and other high-risk specialists, the percentage may go as high as 50, and doctors say the insurance companies are already collecting more than a billion dollars a year from them.

Retiring Early

The crisis is harming health care on a national scale. The AMA reports that more and more doctors are retiring early, going into research, teaching, even the armed forces, where they can work shorter hours for only a small sacrifice in income, and face no insurance worries. Both army and navy say they have had a spate of applications for medical commissions recently.

A shortage of doctors is predicted in some states, if the crisis continues. At the same time, surgeons are said to be refusing high-risk operations and procedures where success is not certain. "Defensive medicine" — needlessly elaborate laboratory tests and X-rays to provide protection against any future suit — may be costing the country as much as $8 billion a year, some experts believe.

In one sense, the doctors' dilemma is of their own making. For years the profession has defended free enterprise and resisted national health schemes, or any outside "interference." Yet now it seeks governmental help to protect doctors' economic interests. They may get more than they expect.

Governor Brown's experts are planning a drastic overhaul of the entire California health system. "No lasting solution to the crisis can come without sacrifice and fundamental reform" they warn. The governor has already put forward a nine-point plan which would not only create a panel to investigate insurance rates and perhaps set limits on awards, but also build up a board with power to police physicians and oblige them to do more to help the poor and needy who are badly served in slums and rural areas. He calls for "a medical peace corps" to end maldistribution of medical care.

Meanwhile, even as the strike slowed in California, it was spreading to other parts of the country. Slowdowns and walkouts began in the mid-West and on the East coast, and doctors said they would continue them until answers to the crisis are found.

Some More Equal Than Others

harry bruce

Marcel Lambert, the Tory MP for Edmonton West, recently denounced the "unprecedented, vitriolic, ill-informed, biased and hypocritical attack" of the press on MPs' salary increases. It hurt his feelings that the press was not so vicious with regard to the judges' salary bill.

"The judges, I suppose, are not the favorite kicking boys of the media," he said, sounding faintly Nixonian.

He misses the point. How convenient it is for him to forget that we do not elect judges to fight inflation for us. His buddies in the Commons tell us all to restrain our greed while, at the same time, they use our money to give themselves raises that would make the greedies among us ecstatic. And then, how trippingly the word "hypocritical" falls from his lips on the press's head.

★

How easily he overlooks the fact that example is a form of leadership and that, ever since the Parliamentarians' grubby scramble for pace-setting raises for themselves, even the most extravagant wage settlements have had an air of dismal inevitablity.

Anyway, why should we knock the judges? Unlike the MPs, they didn't give themselves the increases. No, it was Lambert's colleagues in the Commons who jacked the judges' pay by, in some cases, $21,000 a year. (That's just a raise, remember — judges' total salaries will now range from $43,000 to $65,000.)

But if it will salve Lambert's sense of injury, I'm happy to argue that, in a time in which MPs still trumpet their concern about inflation, the judges' salary bill is disgusting. For its ability to inspire nausea, it approaches even the MPs' salary bill.

Among those who've a right to resent what MPs are doing for themselves and such other exalted folk as the judges, there's a whole gang of more menial public servants in the Maritimes. They are the victims of the feds' system of pay zones. When it comes to certain jobs, mostly blue collar, the government does not believe in equal pay for equal work.

A federal government electrician of a certain classification gets $14,102 a year in Vancouver while his exact counterpart in Nova Scotia gets $9,796. The difference is $4,306. Moreover, since the government gears its pension plans to pay a percentage of the retired worker's wages during his best years, the disparity afflicts the Maritimer even to his last years.

One Maritime public servant calculates that, in the case of the electricians — assuming 30 years' service for each — the Vancouverite will retire on $706 a month, and the Nova Scotian on $489. A difference of $2,604 a year.

"A Maritimer," he says, "is discriminated against for the rest of his natural life. What price a Maritimer? You figure it out. Or ask the federal government. They've already made up their minds, and seem to think we come pretty cheap."

★

Crew aboard government ships earn $100 a month more on the west coast than they do on the east coast. Government carpenters get $6.42 an hour in Toronto, $5.23 in Halifax and Moncton, and $4.75 in the rest of the Maritimes.

A plumber gets $7.14 an hour in Toronto — he gets $5.27 in Sydney. The story is the same for unskilled labor: $4.80 in Vancouver, $3.82 in New Brunswick.

Not only tradesmen, but hospital workers, janitors, supply clerks, fisheries wardens, teachers and people in dozens of other federal jobs get much smaller cheques in Atlantic Canada than they'd get doing the same work for the same employer in Montreal, Toronto, and the west. In Nova Scotia alone, there are probably five thousand such people.

Their union is The Public Service Alliance of Canada. During bargaining between the alliance and the government, the negotiators must keep in mind the 22 pay zones for workers in the labor and trades category, the same 22 zones for those in the general services category, eight zones for those in education, seven for hospital services, and a couple more for ships' crews.

Moreover — and just to give you an idea of the complexity of government labor relations — the labor and trades category (with its 22 pay zones) breaks down into 17 trade groupings and, within one of those, there can be as many as 14 levels of pay.

★

Each level may be lower in Moncton than in Calgary.

Treasury board actually wants to strengthen this system of zone payments even though, in a small but festering way, it promotes jealousy and regional disparity. Meanwhile, we have the deep regional economic expansion, and a billion-odd dollars coming to east-coast Canada in federal equalization payments. And what's their job? Why, of course — it's to conquer regional disparity.

It has not escaped the notice of some Maritime servants of the federal government that judges get the same salaries right across Canada. Government tradesmen, in their more cynical moments, may even have fantasized about the smoke and squealing that would fill the Commons if anyone were ever so crazy as to propose that MPs from the Maritimes (or Edmonton, for that matter) should accept lower salaries than those from Toronto.

Stock Exchanges React Quietly Except For Brief Flurry In Oils

business

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Canadian stock exchanges reacted quietly today to Monday's federal budget with only western oil stocks showing a brief flurry of activity.

Companies specializing in oil exploration were the only ones to gain attention. Large integrated companies like Imperial Oil, which have large refining as well as exploration sections, were relatively unchanged. Imperial A shares actually were down slightly in early trading.

In Vancouver, the mining board was very quiet. A spokesman for the exchange said the number of shares trading hands was far below normal for this time of year.

Mining men said exploration allowances announced by the federal government would have little effect in British Columbia because no exploration was planned in this province until the taxation battle between Ottawa and Victoria was sorted out. The industry feels taxation is too high to warrant further development of mines in B.C.

P. R. Matthew, managing director of the Mining Association of B.C., said the new tax write-offs in the budget amounted to "peanuts."

He said the mining industry would require greater incentives before it would be profitable to explore for additional sources of ore, especially in B.C. where the level of taxation is higher than other provinces because of the royalties on exports.

James Bassett of Victoria, Vancouver Island director of the Investment Dealers Association, said the immediate market reaction has been minimal but the long-term effects of the budget would improve the outlook for oil exploration companies.

He said the important point in the budget was the federal government has recognized the need to offer incentives to the oil industry to increase the supplies of Canadian petroleum products.

Tax reductions to companies engaged in oil exploration will increase their cash flow, which in turn will further increase the exploration program.

In his budget speech, Turner said that mining companies engaged in exploration would find their taxes reduced while those that do not explore and develop new resources could find themselves with higher taxation.

Bassett said the investment industry was pleased to see there was some move towards restraint in federal spending. He said this gesture would ease the rate of inflation and help stabilize the bond market.

"The bond market may be the main area to benefit from this budget," he said.

"This would help because it would enable companies to raise the capital they need for expansion."

He said the Investment Dealers Association was not surprised there had been no action on its request for a tax shelter program in Monday's budget.

He said it might be a year or more before the government takes action because of the complexity of the plan. The IDA has asked the federal government to permit Canadians to buy stocks and deduct the amount from taxation, up to a maximum amount, as long as the stocks are frozen in a registered plan, similar to a registered retirement savings plan.

Bassett said the federal government has indicated interest in the plan.

"However they will want to proceed cautiously because once they started a plan like that it would be difficult to halt it."

He said the government will want to study the effects of the proposal carefully before proceeding.

"I am confident they are still considering the proposal."

B.C. Forest Products

Ian A. Barclay, president of British Columbia Forest Products Ltd., announced Thursday that the company has agreed to acquire the assets of Hampton Lumber Mills Ltd. at Boston Bar, from Willamina Lumber Co. of Oregon.

The purchase includes the Hampton sawmill located at Boston Bar, 135 miles northeast of Vancouver.

K. P. Benson, senior executive vice-president for BCFP, said in a news release the sawmill has a present capacity of 60 million board feet of lumber and 45,000 units of chips a year.

It was reconstructed from 1971 to 1973 following a 1970 fire which partially destroyed the mill, Benson said.

Northair Mines

Northair Mines Ltd. of Vancouver has received production financing for its gold and silver mine near Brandywine Falls, about 50 miles north of Vancouver, a company statement says.

Northair president Don McLeod made the announcement in the company's annual report to shareholders.

McLeod said $4.1 million has been secured from the Royal Bank of Canada, and a $600,000 debenture from Anglo-American Corp. of Canada and Wachovia International Investments Ltd.

McLeod reported the start of the tune-up phase of the 300-ton-a-day concentrator at the company's mine should commence early in 1976.

He said metallurgy studies on the mine ores has indicated recoveries of 96 per cent of the gold, 82 per cent of the silver, 94 per cent of the zinc, 91 per cent of the lead, and 86 per cent of the copper.

Wardair

Wardair Canada Ltd. has reported earnings of $572,000 or 18 cents a share for the first three months of 1975 compared with $606,000 or 19 cents a share during the same period of 1974.

The airline, in a news release, said gross operating revenues for the first quarter increased sharply to $15.007 million from $8.487 million, but expenses increased to $13.019 million from $7.167 million.

Max Ward, Wardair president, said the substantial increase in revenues was attributed to the addition of a second Boeing 747 Jet operated on inclusive tours to vacation destinations.

Increased costs, particularly for fuel, is increasing the airline's operating expenses, he said.

Ward said he was "cautiously optimistic" that 1975's operating results will continue favorable.

Anglican Rejection Seen As Prelude To Full Union

Anglican abandonment of the Plan of Union that would join the church with two other Christian faiths in Canada will pave the way for wider negotiations involving more faiths, says Canon Grahame Baker.

Rector of St. John's on Quadra, Baker is one of nine Vancouver Island diocese delegates just back from a week-long church synod in Quebec city.

Formal abandonment of the plan published in booklet form in 1972 was a major step taken at the national synod, he said.

"The present Plan of Union has been abandoned. However, commitments have been reaffirmed in the faith and order principles. There's a commitment made to seek unity on this basis with any other Christian bodies in Canada."

Union plans in the works since 1967—would have joined the Anglican Church with the United Church of Canada and the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in one ecumenical group called the Church of Christ in Canada.

Baker along with diocesan representatives Jim McPherrin and Dean Brian Whitlow think rejection of the plan could mean total Christian union in the future.

"The (Anglican) Church has always thought of itself as the bridge between the Roman Catholic Church and other Protestant faiths," said McPherrin.

Acceptance of the 1972 plan, already accepted by the other two churches involved, may have shut out the Roman Catholic Church for good, he said.

"We're hoping negotiations will widen," said Baker.

He said both Roman Catholics and Presbyterians there expressed interest in the union.

Victoria synod delegates were Baker, McPherrin, Whitlow, Canon Thomas Bailey, Canon Hilary Butler, Ruth Scott, Michael Manning, Walter Barss and Lia Versaevel.

Crown Ends Dredging Case

HAMILTON (CP) The Crown completed its case in the Hamilton harbor dredging trial Monday, seven weeks and one day after the start of the proceedings.

Among the last witnesses called by Crown prosecutor Clay Powell were former harbor commissioners Delbert Hickey and Joseph Lanza.

The two men both denied any knowledge of the kickbacks and payoffs alleged to have been given to their former colleague, Kenneth Elliott.

Elliott and local businessman Reginald Fisher are charged with 10 counts of conspiracy, fraud and uttering forged documents in connection with alleged shady deals on dredging and construction projects in the harbor in 1970-72.

Horace Joe Rindress, a former dredging company executive, told the court earlier he gave a kickback to Elliott on a 1971-72 dredging project, a pay-off which Elliott told him was to be divided among the three commissioners.

Hickey and Lanza both denied receiving any benefits from their position as commissioners.

The three men were appointed in 1964. Elliott resigned early in 1973, and the other two retired from the commission in December, 1973.

Hickey said he had no knowledge of any kickbacks paid on dredging or construction projects, saying that if he had known, he would have notified the authorities.

He said he and Lanza went to federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand in 1973 to urge that he speed up an RCMP investigation into allegations about the commission.

Hickey said of Elliott: "Mr. Elliott was irresponsible, he exaggerated, he was sometimes rude, but not always. I never thought he was dishonest, but Idid not think he was qualified to act as a harbor commissioner."

Lanza testified he and Hickey objected to Elliott's appointment from the beginning. Elliott was the municipal representative on the three-man commission, with the other two appointed by the federal cabinet.

Earlier testimony from Rindress and tape recordings of conversations between Rindress and Elliott had the former harbor commissioner insisting that a kickback of several hundred thousand dollars was divided with Hickey and Lanza.

Tutoring Plan At 5 Schools

An educational program for youngsters who need extra tutoring has spread from one to five schools this summer.

Project Opportunity, a six-week mornings-only program that began last summer at George Jay elementary school, will be offered at four other schools as well starting July 7.

The program, conceived and organized by Dean Heights junior high teacher Ken Fletcher, is for children aged 7 to 12 whose parents feel they need more educational or social help than the regular school year provides.

It aims at social and emotional development as well as helping the children retain skills over the summer months so they'll be ready for the new school year in September.

Each school's program will have four professional teachers and two assistants. Pupil enrolment will be limited to 90 per school, to give a 15-1 pupil-teacher ratio.

Basic curriculum for all programs is language arts-arithmetic, art-music, and physical education.

Fletcher said there will be swimming twice a week, plus field trips, and much of the teaching will be done by games so the children will enjoy it.

Fees are charged on a sliding scale according to the parents' ability to pay, with the maximum fee $75 per child.

Fletcher said each school program will have a five-member parent board which will help run the program, which will be 8:45 a.m. to noon five days a week until Aug. 15.

Parents seeking more information may call any of the following teachers: Dave Hutchings of Blanshard, 598-7866; Allison Rycroft of George Jay, 383-7073; Sharon Hopper of Tillicum, 478-2711; John Lauvass of Macaulay, 477-8043; or Gary Garraway of Vic West, 388-4991.

Going by ferry this holiday weekend?

On long weekends, everyone seems to want to use our services at the same time. So when driving a car you have to expect overload delays of three hours or so at peak periods. But there are alternatives open to you.

First, you might consider walking aboard. Simply park in the parking lot or have someone drop you off at the terminal passenger area. It's a good way of ensuring that you catch the first available sailing.

Second, you might sail by bus. Pacific Stage Lines operate a regular scheduled service between Vancouver—Victoria, Vancouver—Nanaimo. They are first on, first off and first downtown with convenient stops enroute.

Third, if you must take your car you might consider travelling in off-peak hours. The only really easy times to travel are late Saturday and early Sunday.

Ferry passengers are reminded that the final sailing on each route will be as published in the current schedule folder.

If we can help with further information phone the British Columbia Ferry Information Centre,

$5M Set for Rural Housing

A federal-provincial rural housing program will add 350 housing units at an estimated cost of $5.27 million in remote areas of B.C. this year, Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson said Monday.

Construction has started on 155 units in 20 communities, Nicolson said. Costs are shared 75 per cent by Ottawa and 25 per cent by the province.

Final cost of all the units will reach $12 million.

Under the scheme private contractors will construct the homes financed through the Assisted Home Ownership Program and units will then be turned over to the governments and sold on a subsidized basis to eligible families.

Successful applicants will surrender their $1,000 provincial home acquisition grant as downpayment for the house, as well as the $500 federal new home buyers' grant.

Mortgage payments will be scaled to income with a minimum monthly $50 payment. Maximum mortgage payments will not be more than 25 per cent of income, Nicolson said.

Subsidy is repayable, less $300 a year if the house is sold before the end of the 25-year mortgage.

Units under construction this year include: 20 units at Burns Lake, 15 in Fort Nelson, 12 in Lumby, 10 in New Hazelton, Vanderhoof and Fort St. James, eight in Clinton, 100 Mile House and Ashcroft.

Other locations are: Princeton, seven units; Salmon Arm, Armstrong, Oliver, six; Grainisle, McBride, Chetwynd, Masset and Port Edward, five, and two each at Enderby and Creston.

Nicolson said 25 units were constructed last year under the program in Fort Nelson, Port Hardy and Alert Bay.

Opposition Balks At Williams' Bill

Resources Minister Bob Williams' bill to allow establishment of Crown corporations and development of Crown land was approved in principle by a vote of 27 to 17 in the legislature Tuesday.

All opposition members voted against the legislation and indicated they will debate the bill strenuously during section by section scrutiny later this week.

Williams dismissed opposition fears that the legislation would allow him complete and unfettered powers without the opportunity of review and scrutiny by the legislature.

The minister said intent of the Department of Lands Forests and Water Resources Amendment Act is simply to enable his department to set up a Crown corporation to run the Princess Marguerite and develop the Inner Harbor and resort areas like Whistler Mountain.

Independent MLA Garde Gardom (Vancouver-Point Grey) said, however, the provincial government already has the power to set up a corporation to run ferry services and develop land.

He referred to a statute passed in 1912 "that is still part of the law of the province."

A statute authorizing B.C. Railway allows that corporation to lease, operate and manage ferries, purchase wharfs and develop crown land, he said.

"The minister didn't read that bill," said Gardom.

"What has happened here is the desire of this minister to have this matter within his control ... matters that should have passed to others."

Saanich Socred MLA Hugh Curtis said the bill showed "a new low in the self-righteousness" of Williams.

"We will not accept the shallow argument that the bill is designed to allow operation of the Princess Marguerite — it's pathetic nonsense."

The legislation allows Williams to set up Crown corporations, own and operate shipping vessels and borrow up to a total of $10 million without the consent of the legislature.

'Hack, OAP' Head Mines

Mines Minister Leo Nimsick and his associate deputy minister Hart Horn draw fire from a Socred MLA during mining department debate in the legislature Monday.

Jim Chabot (Columbia) accused Horn of using political rhetoric to defend cutbacks in the department spending.

He called Horn a "political hack" and Nimsick—a veteran MLA with 26 years in the legislature—"an old-aged pensioner."

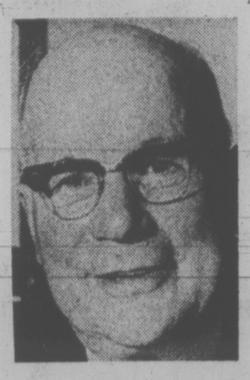
While others in the house chuckled, Chabot quickly withdrew his remark about Nimsick, but he refused to take back his description of Horn.

Horn was first hired as an executive assistant to the mines minister and then became associate deputy minister "giving the minister the odd job" to do, said Chabot.

"I take strong exception to associate deputy minister's issuing political lies about why prospectors grants are being withdrawn," said Chabot, alleging Horn is using the lengthy debate on department spending estimates to explain a cutback in prospectors' grants.

House Leader Eileen Dailly said Chabot's comments were unparliamentary, and she called on committee chairman Chris D'Arcy (Rossland-Trail) for a ruling.

D'Arcy said that although the remarks were not unparliamentarian, "it certainly is not in order to attack the conduct of a high civil servant during debate."



NIMSICK
... defends assistant

"Please," he asked Chabot "use restraint."

Nimsick too criticized Chabot's attack of a civil servant "who is not here to defend himself."

He said there is a delay in issuing prospectors grants. Issuance would be ineffective if done on a partial payment once a month.

"I don't think Horn made a wrong statement."

Wallace Urges Quick Action On Fire Service

Oak Bay Tory Scott Wallace Monday called for immediate action by the provincial government to upgrade fire-fighting facilities in light of Saturday's triple-death fire at the Royal Olympic Hotel.

Wallace asked Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall in the legislature what measures the provincial government has taken to modernize equipment and funding.

The Olympic Hotel blaze, said Wallace, comes hard on the heels of the government report into fire-fighting services.

"The hotel fire was clearly caused because it did not meet safety standards ... and there are at least another 1,000 rooms in similar condition in the core of Victoria," said Wallace.

"Have there been any applications to the Treasury Board for funds to allow municipalities to upgrade fire prevention?" he asked.

Hall, standing in for Attorney-General Alex Macdonald who is in London, said he would answer the questions today.

The report referred to by Wallace was complied by Dr. Hugh Keenleyside and released earlier this month. It said $4 million is needed by municipalities to upgrade "scandalous" fire-fighting conditions.

Film Industry Seeks Aid

A provincial cabinet committee will meet representatives of the B.C. film industry to discuss possible assistance to the industry, Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said Tuesday.

Hall said the meeting will be set after the legislture prorogues.

"There's a great deal of concern over the future of the industry," said Hall, adding he is meeting with the federal government to work out an agreement to "assist all things Canadian."

Replying to a question from Liberal Gordon Gibson North Vancouver - Capilano) Hall said if Ontario measures thwart the growth of B.C.'s industry, he would not hesitate to make representations to that provincial government.

Gibson had asked what measures the government will take if Ontario introduces a quota system requiring theatres in that province to play a maximum number of domestically-made films.

A co-ordinated ticket tax rebate may apply only to filmmakers may apply only to Ontario-made films, making B.C. producers ineligible.

NO HYDRO RATE HIKE FOR DOMESTIC USERS

No rate increases are for domestic users of B.C. Hydro electricity or gas, Resources Minister Bob Williams said Monday.

He told the legislature the only increase will affect large bulk industrial consumers who were notified 10 months ago that the new rate will come into effect soon.

"That's the only increase I'm aware of," Williams said in answer to questions from Socred Ed Smith (South Peace).

B.C. Hydro chairman David Cass-Beggs said Sunday there is no increase in electrical and gas rates planned in direct response to the 30 per cent contract settlement proposed for Hydro linemen.

Earlier, however, he was quoted as saying increases were likely.

Convicts Used Terror Tactics To 'Dehumanize' Pen Hostages

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fifteen hostages held in the British Columbia penitentiary by three prisoners two weeks ago were told they were on death row, one of them said Monday at the federally-appointed Farris inquiry into the incident.

Classification officer John Ryan also told of being kicked repeatedly, having a knife held at his throat and struck in his eye, of clothing being slashed with a knife while he was wearing it and of being forced to take overdoses of a drug.

He said in what he referred to as "this dehumanizing" process, Lucas said the hostages were on death row, and that persons on death row were not allowed certain things. At this time, Ryan's prescription glasses were taken from him and smashed and glasses were also taken from other hostages, he said.

His account of what happened in the 41 hours in which 12 men and three women were held by three knife-wielding prisoners came after the inquiry was told by lawyer Walley Lightbody of a mass refusal by hostages and prison guards to testify in public on the grounds that their lives might be endangered.

Lightbody, appearing for the hostages and members of the tactical squad of prison guards involved in the final shot-splattered freeing of them, said outside the hearing that Ryan decided to testify because "he has no evidence to give that is detrimental to the hostages."

"There is only a certain amount of evidence we had a concern over — that which involves the lives and safety of certain individuals and their relationship in the prison with the inmates," Lightbody said.

Ryan said some mercurochrome was tipped over his eyes and then prisoner Claire Wilson, 25, told him to wipe it off.

Commission counsel John Rowman: "I take it that it burned?"

"You better believe it," Ryan said.

Ryan said he and the other men were deprived of their jackets which were piled on the floor and later slashed by prisoner Dwight Douglas Lucas, 20, with some assistance from Wilson.

After the jackets were removed, the hostages were deprived of their watches, rings —except wedding rings— wallets, other valuables and shoes," Ryan said.

He said Wilson and Lucas went through some the wallets, making comments about the contents, and he saw Wilson light a cigarette with a $20 bill.

"I had difficulty in removing a jade ring, Ryan said. "I was told 'take it off or we will cut your finger off' by Lucas."

Ryan said Lucas threatened several times to cut off his left small finger and thumb.

He said Wilson and Lucas were concerned with the hostages while prisoner Andy Bruce was "in and out" of the small storage vault where the hostages spent most of their ordeal.

He said any time there was an activity, moment or noise from the outside, he Ryan would be grabbed by the throat by Lucas and the knife stuck against it.

"I was told if there were any shots from the other side, I would be first to go," Ryan said.

He said that on one occasion Lucas put the point of a knife into his right eye and asked " 'How would you like to lose your eyes?' "

Ryan said the hostages were ordered to keep their hands on their heads for long periods of time and only allowed to bring them down when Lucas saw they were tired and would allow them to have a cigarette.

Whenever there were noises outside, the hostages were ordered to put their hands back on their heads, Ryan said.

New Offices For Ferry

The B.C. Steamship Co. which runs the provincial government's Princess Marguerite, will open offices in Ottawa and Washington State, Resources Minister Bob Williams said Monday.

Williams said the expansion of offices is necessary because the Victoria-Seattle ferry crosses an international boundary.

Mobiles Top List Of Gripes

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Mobile homes have been the subject of most of the complaints received by the provincial department of consumer services, Michael Audain, chairman of the task force investigating mobile homes, said Monday.

Audain said the department of housing has also received many complaints about mobile homes.

The four-member task force was appointed by the provincial government to investigate virtually every aspect of mobile homes. The other members of the group are Svend Robinson, Paul Joyce and George Gibault.

Most of the submissions to the task force Monday were from owners of mobile home parks who said they have been squeezed between increased property taxes and the provincial government's 10:6-limit on rent increases.

Basketball: The Feet, And Olympic Standards

The things you get in the mail, or catching up on the past few weeks as time will allow. And with the Canadian national basketball team bidding for a berth in a Mexican League this winter, there has been the suggestion that henceforth we will be known as "The El Ropo Leafs". Coach Jack Donohue says the team needs the competition and it also needs $100,000 to pay the bills; and if that includes sponsorship, don't laugh. The El Ropos could be carrying the national flag in the Olympic parade suggests columnist Bob Mellor.

He also says it is a national disgrace, "a manifestation of the same kind of thinking that erected those high board fences along Dorchester street to conceal Montreal's filthy slums during the glittering spectacle of Expo." Couldn't agree more, but it's a mark of the determination of Donohue that Canada grab a medal in the Olympics, or as he said about a year ago: "We're going to win a medal, we just haven't decided which color."

There was also this article on "Footwork in sports", and the truism is just that: "As the legs go, so goes the career," and what is true for the professional athlete is equally applicable to the recreational athlete. And young athletes should pay heed.

The message is simple if commercial. "Maybe you've never thought of your socks as sports equipment. But you should. They're almost as necessary as a golf club to a golfer or a bat to a baseball player. . . ." All very true because there's no getting away from one fact. Your arms are merely an extension of the strength and balance in your legs and really, you can't get anywhere in sports without a good pair of feet. And no charge for the plug either.

"In England, people go mostly to cricket grounds to watch one-day matches, which have stultified the silken touch as much as dead pitches. With defensive fields set, players ringing the boundary, a fine cover-drive will be worth merely a single — and no draw for applause. The subleties of footwork, wristwork and timing do not register in the eye of the people whose simple creed is action."

Well, each to his own, and it may or may not be generally known, but when the Australian cricket team was upset by a Canadian side a few weeks ago while en route to Britain, Reuters, the British-based news service, made two special calls to Toronto to check the match result. They simply couldn't believe what had come over the wire. So maybe we should make cricket our national summer sport. After all, the Australians were considered unbeatable, weren't they?

★ ★ ★

And, in answer to a query, when Canada's Ethel Catherwood won the high jump in the Olympics in 1928, she did it with a jump of 5' 3". Today the qualifying standard for the women's high jump is 5' 11¾", as converted from the metric. If you want some other comparisons, when Percy Williams of Vancoucer won the 100 and 200 metres his respective times were 10.8 and 21.8. The admission standards this time around are 10.2 and 20.8. In the 400 metres Ray Barbutti of the U.S. was timed in 47.8. The new standard is 46.4; and for the 800 metres, the 1928 time was 1:51.8, Britain's Douglas Lowe winning. Now he would have to run the distance in 1:47.4 to get to Montreal. And so the magic times change. And this is not to say that competitors can't compare if they don't meet the standards. There is a saving clause which dictates that any nation can enter one athlete in any event. If more than one entry is entered, the exception is nullified for all entries. This is to give the host nation and the have-not countries at least a chance, which is what the Olympics are supposed to be all about. And if anyone is still in doubt as to whether the Olympics will go on as scheduled in Montreal, here is the latest by International Olympic Committee President Lord Killanin: "Barring a world cataclysm, there is absolutely no doubt the 1976 Olympic Games will open in Montreal as scheduled." A cataclysm is a violent, usually destructive, upheaval. So he also says . . . "the facilities being built for the Games will serve Montreal for up to 70 years . . ." and that is the cost factor which has more Canadians up tight than the Games themselves.

Dionne, Jabbar: $4 Million in Scoring

A week ago Monday he signed Kareem Abdul-Jabbar for his Lakers of the National Basketball Association. That cost him $2.5 million.

This Monday, he signed Marcel Dionne for his Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League. That cost him $1.5 million.

Over all, this could mean a lot of scoring at his Forum at a cost of $4 million.

Jabbar four times had been an all-league basketball player.

Dionne had been an all-star with Detroit Red Wings but didn't continue his multi-year contract, which made him fair game for the other teams.

The Kings gave up Dan Maloney, who scored 27 goals last season, and defenceman Terry Harper plus a 1976 second-round draft choice to get Dionne.

Although the Detroit star played out his contract last year and was free to sign with a team of his choice for 1975-76, there remained the question of compensating the Detroit club. So the trade was arranged.

In addition to Dionne, the Kings got the contract of defenceman Bart Crashley.

"The biggest thrill in my life was to turn pro," commented Dionne at the news conference to announce his signing. "Now it's to be in Los Angeles. I want to thank Mr. Cooke. He wanted me here."

Dionne disputed those who said he was a player oriented to offence.

"I broke records as an offensive hockey player," he said, "but I can become a complete hockey player."

Mike's Effort In Vain

COQUITLAM—Mike Beaulac put on a brilliant show Monday but it wasn't enough for Victoria Shamrocks.

Beaulac scored three goals and added seven assists, but Shamrocks lost 18-15 in overtime to Coquitlam Adanacs in a Western Lacrosse Association game before 276 fans.

The win was only the third of the season for the last-place Adanacs and moved them within two points of fourth-place Nanaimo Timbermen, who have played two more games.

The loss was the second straight for the third-place Shamrocks and kept them six points behind New Westminster Salmonbellies and Vancouver Burrards, tied for the league lead.

Beaulac sent the game into overtime when he tied the contest 15-15 with 35 seconds left in regulation play. His goal came with Victoria shorthanded.

It was all Coquitlam, however, in the overtime.

Rhys Parsons added the insurance markers, one with the Adanacs two men short and the other into an empty net with less than two minutes to play.

Besides Beaulac, Victoria got three goals from Dave Thomson. Charn Dhill, who also contributed his 400th career point, had two goals and five assists with Pete Rushton, Ranjit Dillon and Mike Walsh also scoring twice each. Jerry Kustaski had the other goal.

Shamrocks were without the services of forwards Ron MacNeil (work commitment) and Bob Turkington (injury) and coach Archie Browning. Nirmal Dillon filled in behind the bench and also took a regular shift on the floor.

Lou Plugs To Jackpot

MEDINAH, Ill. (AP) — Lou Graham, in an unflappable manner that marked him as one of the steadiest performers is this year's unsteady U.S. open golf championship, shot a par 71 over the Medinah course Monday to win an 18-hole playoff from John Mahaffey.

Mahaffey, 27, was never ahead and trailed by as many as three strokes in fashioning a 73. In defeat, Mahaffey could barely contain the anguish he felt after finishing second for the seventh time in the last 1½ years.

For Graham, a 37-year-old Tennessean, it was only the third victory in 11 years of plugging on the tour.

The key, Graham said, was his putt on the 205-yard eighth for par. He was in the fringe 75 feet away and left himself a tricky eight-footer.

"It lipped the hole then came in the right door, and that was it—I figured I was on my way."

And on the 18th, when his two-iron went into the trees, he said he heard a TV man say if the ball hadn't hit a spectator it would have gone out of bounds.

"I then said to myself: 'This golf tournament belongs to Lou Graham.'" Later, an official who was there said the ball did not hit a spectator.

The $40,000 first prize increased Graham's winnings for the year to $86,071. Mahaffey's $20,000 cheque ran his earnings to $121,665 for sixth place on the list.

Mahaffey, who used 37 putts, bogeyed the second hole by three-putting and lost a stroke. Graham overshot the third for a bogey as his opponent parred to draw even. Then Graham birdied the next two holes with eight-and six-foot putts and Mahaffey never caught up.

Injuries Trim Macs' Power

Victoria McDonalds are hoping their injury list won't grow tonight when they meet Coquitlam J-Hawks in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Rookie Steve Hepburn suffered a broken jaw Saturday in Richmond in Victoria's 12 - 10 triumph against the Roadrunners. He was hit on a shot by clubmate Ken King.

Hepburn ,who had 11 goals and 30 assists in 13 games, is expected to miss at least six weeks of action.

High-scoring Norm Baker is the other Victoria player who will miss tonight's encounter. He suffered a hand injury at work last week and will possibly miss Friday's contest in New Westminster.

Cellar Escaped By Tony's Crew

Ross Johnson hurled a four-hit shutout Monday night to help Tony's Holdings move out of last place in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League with a 10-0 decision over second-place Royal Oak Sporting Goods at Central Park.

Mark Perkins led the eight-hit batting effort by Tony's with two doubles in three trips to the plate. He scored once and drove in two runs.

Tony's bunched all scoring and most hitting into two big innings, connecting for three hits and four runs in the first inning and bashing out four hits for six trallies in the sixth frame.

In Victoria Senior Women's League play at Hyacinth Park, Mavis Underwood hurled a three-hitter to push Y-Not Holdings to a 6-3 decision over Ingraham Hotel while Debbie Derksen earned with pitching victory as CJVI Vicettes tripped Hygrade Radio, 6-2.

Bookies Invade Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON (AP) — The All-England Club, bowing to popular demand, has allowed one of the country's biggest firms of bookmakers to set up a tent to take bets on tennis during the Wimbledon tournaments.

Betting is legal in Britain and the betting shop is vying in popularity with the bars and the strawberries and cream tent.

With only 19 matches out of a scheduled 60 finished Monday, referee Mike Gibson was faced with a problem for the second day's card today.

Of the matches that could be finished, Jimmy Connors had to fight hard to beat British youngster John Lloyd 6-2, 6-3, 6-1; third-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden beat Venezuelan Jorge Andrew, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4, and Onny Parun of New Zealand beat Australian Neale Fraser 6-3, 6-2, 9-7.

It wouldn't be Wimbledon without an upset, and the first one this year came from Ray Ruffels, a veteran Australian player. He beat Vitas Gerulaitis of the U.S. 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1.

HORNETS PLAY MORE KNIGHTS

Saanich Hornets, who won the Vancouver Island junior bantam Canadian football championship with a 62-21 triumph over Oak Bay Crusaders, return to action Wednesday night.

Hornets, who averaged 60 points per game during their season, tackle a Mainland junior high school squad, the St. Thomas More Knights, in an exhibition game starting at 7:30 at Royal Athletic Park.

ISLAND GOLFER TIED FOR LEAD

CASTLEGAR—Defending champion Sandy Harper of Nanaimo and Jim Goddard of Vancouver shared the lead after carding even-par 72s Monday in the opening round of the 72-hole B.C. junior golf championship.

Another Nanaimo, golfer, Aren Fredericksen, fired a 73 to finish in a three-way tie for third with Don Lewis of Tsawwassen and Blair Christie of Vancouver.

Today's second round was scheduled for the Birchbank course near Trail, the third round will be back here Wednesday and the final round will also be played at Birchbank.

The field will be cut to the low 100 following today's round and, for the first time, the first 36 holes in this tournament will serve as qualifying rounds for the Canadian junior open Aug. 27-30 at Victoria's Gorge Vale course.

No New Teams In WCHL

LETHBRIDGE—There won't be any more teams in the Western Canada Hockey League next season but there will be more games.

At the first day of the annual league meetings Monday, the WCHL governors agreed to an increase in games from 70 to 72 per team and turned down applications for expansion teams in Vancouver and Portland.

The Vancouver bid for a team, with Pacific Coliseum as its home arena, came from an Edmonton group headed by former WCHL coach and general manager Brian Shaw. The Portland application came from a group of U.S. investors.

The last time the league expanded was in 1971 when Victoria Cougars and Vancouver Nats (now Kamloops Chiefs) were admitted.

League president Ed Chynoweth said the governors agreed they must concentrate on improving existing franchises before thinking of another expansion.

The governors are also considering a plan to increase the number of playoff teams in the 12-man league from eight to 10. Most clubs are apparently in favor of the idea after rejecting a similar plan midway through last season.

Chynoweth said a decision will also be made today on whether the league will go with one 12-club division or remain as two six-team divisions.

Pearl Ott Wins

Top Golf Teams Eye Advantage

Defending champion Cedar Hill has an edge in position but Gorge Vale winds up with home-course advantage as the Inter-Club Golf League teams play their final round Wednesday.

Cedar Hill carries a two-point hold on first place but will play its final round at Uplands. Second-place Gorge Vale will be at home to third-place Glen Meadows, another 2½ points off the pace but in position to determine the winner of the 1975 Willie Park Driver competition.

Colwood will visit Victoria in Wednesday's other match.

Penguin-Purchase Plan

PITTSBURGH (AP) — James Flaherty, a member of the public authority which runs the Civic Arena, Monday suggested the authority consider buying the debt-ridden Pittsburgh Penguins National Hockey League team.

Flaherty, a candidate for Allegheny County commissioner, said the purchase might be needed to prevent the team from folding and protect the arena financially.

The arena is adding 3000 seats at a cost of $4 million. It had been planned that rental revenue from the Penguins would offset the expense.

"If we're going to be stuck with a $4 million bill, we might as well use the money to buy Penguins," Flaherty said. "Then maybe we can get them back in shape and sell the team to a private owner at a profit to the authority."

The Penguins went into receivership June 13 because of debts in excess of $7 million.

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League announced Monday they have traded right-winter Gary Sabourin to California Seals for centre Stan Weir.

Weir, a 23-year-old from Ponoka, Alta., was chosen in the second round of the 1972 amateur draft by the Seals. He jumped directly from Medicine Hat Tigers of the Western Canada Hockey League to the Seals.

Weir scored 39 goals and 58 assists in 216 games over three seasons for the Seals. Last season, he scored 15 goals and 27 assists and tied Larry Patey for the team scoring leadership.

Sabourin, 31, came to the Leafs from St. Louis Blues when goaltender Eddie Johnston was traded from Toronto. He was used sparingly by the Leafs last season and scored five goals and picked up 18 assists in 55 games.

MONTREAL (CP) — General manager Bill Torrey of New York Islanders says that right-winger Billy Harris, 23, has agreed to a new three-year contract with the National Hockey League club.

Applaud, If You Will, For Victoria's Champs

If you have something nice to say about someone, a wise one once said, say it while they still can hear you.

This is for the ladies: Their champions are a delight.

Many years ago a young golf writer had some reservations about dealing with women golfers. The warning came with early guidelines: Don't worry if they don't report high scores . . . Never ask their ages . . . Refrain from saying one "upended" another because it isn't dignified . . . And so one . . .

Another city women's tournament has gone by the boards, but not before leaving a reminder that the good ones always seem to be champions in the personality division. If that's not the case elsewhere, then Victoria happens to be lucky.

Over the years, Dorothy DeGirolamo, Dale Shaw, Shirley Naysmith, Marg Todd, Joan Lawson, Eileen Anderson and others have been co-operative, gracious and always pleasant. Confronted as losers, their personalities are unchanged.

Coming to Glen Meadows via the Okanagan, she was virtually unknown until she emerged in this year's semi-finals. A good swing, excellent putting touch and that bubbling personality indicates Diane will fit in nicely with the championship crowd.

School exams prevented Colwood's Sydney Thomson from entering the city women's tournament; otherwise she might have made things interesting.

The 16-year-old made a move to reduce her seven handicap by scoring a two-over-par 78 at Glen Meadows. She chipped in for a birdie three on the 18th to finish only three strokes off the course record established by Dale Shaw.

The round puts Sydney in excellent position to repeat as a member of the B.C. junior women's team. It came in her third of the six Centennial Cup rounds which determine the team. Sydney scored an 81 in the first round and a 91 in the Mid-Island junior tournament at Nanaimo.

One more round in Vancouver and two in the B.C. junior championship will complete Sydney's trial series.

The 78, a whopping 16 strokes ahead of her nearest rival at Glen Meadows, also indicates Sydney is ready to defend her PNGA championship at the Twin Lakes course in Washington next month.

SHORT CHIPS: Cedar Hill's Heather Stewart was runnerup to Miss Thomson in the Centennial Cup matches while Joan Robertson of Glen Meadows and Chris Rimmington of Victoria finished 1-2 in the net division . . . The signs look favorable, but Saanich Council will have to have at least one more meeting before approving expansion of Cedar Hill to a par 68 course from the present 65 . . . Tad McDiarmid and Keith Burrell combined for a pair of 68s to win the R. F. Williams best-ball tournament at Uplands . . . Jim Rutledge, the city junior champ who divides his allegiance between Uplands and Cedar Hill, provides the only interruption to Gorge Vale's cleanup of district championship . . . Mrs. DeGirolamo brings the city women's trophy to a clubhouse that already has the Island Open (Grant Milliken), men's and intermediate (Cec Ferguson) and Centennial Foursomes (Hugh Reid and Wes Green) trophies . . . There, now, you all have the answer in case Leo Derman comes around to ask the question . . . Vince Clarkson connected for a hole-in-one last week on the 191-yard fourth hole at Uplands. It was Vince's second ace, and his second at Uplands . . .

Cedar Hill's Gord Rands fired a four-under-par 64 Saturday to win the Metchosin Open . . . Colwood's Steve Hambleton, Dan McLintick of Cedar Hill, Peter Moretti of Golf Services and Metchosin's Bob Johnstone rounded out the top five . . . John Mertes led Metchosin golfers to the top five low net prizes . . . Following Mertes were clubmates Ray Hershmiller, Joe Iannarelli, Phil Cotrell and Richard Jones . . .

Large Coho Squad

Juan de Fuca Cohos, the reigning Vancouver Island champions, will be represented by more than 70 swimmers at the provincial championship meet this weekend in Vancouver.

Judy Newman is ranked second in the 15-17-year-old girls' breaststroke; Alison Noble is third in the 13-14 girls' 100-metre backstroke; Janice Mason is seventh in the girls' 15-17 100-metre breaststroke; Paul Sparrow is seventh in the boys' 10-and-under 100-metre backstroke as well as eighth in the 200-metre individual medley, and Doug Portelance is rated eighth in the 15-17 100-metre backstroke.

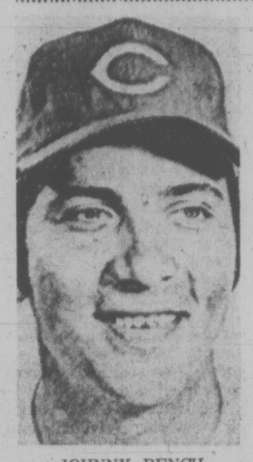
At the club's annual picnic and club championship meet last Sunday, Miss Newman was picked as the outstanding female swimmer and won the award for scoring the most points in inter-club competitions.

Portelance was named the outstanding male swimmer and Sparrow collected the award for accumulating the most inter-club points.

Age-class award winners:

GIRLS: Jeanne Helgeson and Jennifer Patten (tie, eight and under); Wendy Boellaard (10 and under); Linda Osowetski and Susan Fukuyama (tie, 11-12); Allison Noble (13-14); Judy Newman (senior).

BOYS: John Boellaard (8 and under); Wayne Bonsdorf (10 and under); Mat Porter (11-12); Ted Packford (13-14); John Ellis (senior).



JOHNNY BENCH

Variety Keeps Bench Happy

By The Associated Press

Variety, they say, is the spice of life. It may also be the key to a runs-batted-in title for Johnny Bench this season.

The Cincinnati star drove in four more runs Monday night, raising his 1975 total to 61 in the 70 games the Reds have played. He hit his 15th home run and a double in leading Cincinnati's 8-4 triumph over Atlanta Braves.

In other National League baseball action, Chicago Cubs blanked Montreal Expos 6-0, St. Louis Cardinals swept a doubleheader from New York Mets 1-0 and 4-0, Houston Astros beat Los Angeles Dodgers 6-5, Philadelphia Phillies defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 6-5 and San Diego Padres beat San Francisco Giants 7-6.

The reason for continued success at the bat, says Bench, is an occasional move from his accustomed position behind the plate to less confined areas such as left field.

"If I can play somewhere else besides catcher about once every 10 days, I do a lot better," said the 27-year-old Bench, tops in the league in RBIs and one away from the home run lead.

"It gets awfully heavy behind the plate and I need a rest occasionally. I had caught two weeks straight until tonight and I got a little weary."

So he took it easy against the Braves, making the most of his two hits and taking no pity on rookie Atlanta starter Jamie Easterly who lost his first major-league decision.

In the American League pitchers Doc Medich and Bill Singer tried different ways of breaking out of a slump. Both worked but Singer still ended up a loser.

Medich, 6-9, thinks he found himself during his own six-game tailspin earlier this year. "The losing streak I had enlightened me a little bit," he said after pitching an eight-hitter against Baltimore to help New York Yankees beat the Orioles 6-1 Monday night.

Singer, 6-8, thinks he found himself "looking at old scrapbooks with my wife the past three days, just to put myself back in the right frame of mind."

It might have helped his frame of mind but it didn't improve his record. He pitched 11 innings of one-hit ball for California before being lifted, then Texas beat the Angels 1-0 in 13 innings.

In other American League baseball games, Oakland A's beat Minnesota Twins 5-2, Cleveland Indians defeated Boston Red Sox 11-3 and Milwaukee Brewers defeated Detroit Tigers 8-4.

Dale Has It In For Kubiceks

The Senior Babe Ruth All-Star hurler posted his second straight shutout over Kubiceks on Monday as All-Stars downed the senior club 2-0 in an interlocking contest at Lambrick Park.

Aune pitched All-Stars to a 1-0 victory last time the two teams met.

He struck out seven batters and scattered seven hits for the win and his clubmates provided both runs in the first inning. Randy Price singled, Mark Lawless doubled and Price scored on a groundout by Tony Armstrong. Lawless later scored on an error.

Vancouver Runner Triumphs

DAGNAES, Denmark (AP) — Maurten Crowley of Vancouver won a duel with two other Canadians to win the 800-metre run Monday in an invitational track and field meet.

Miss Crowley ran the distance in two minutes, 4.8 seconds to beat Joan Wenzell of Waterloo, Ont., who was second in 2:05.6, and Debbie Mitchell of Toronto, who was third in 2:06.0.

Miss Wenzell's time was the best of her career. Anne-Marie Davies of Winnipeg was seventh and Donna Valaitis of Mount Brydges, Ont., eighth in the race.

Other Canadian winners in Monday's competition were high jumper John Beers of Burnaby (7 feet, 1 inch), Joe Sax of Toronto, 7:59.2 in the 3,000-metre run and Ann Bryan of Mississauga, Ont., 19 feet in the long jump.

Griffith 4th

CHICAGO — Tom Griffin of Victoria's Mt. Douglas Senior Secondary finished fourth in the 880 yards at Saturday's U.S. high school invitational track meet here.

With the temperature in the mid-90s, Griffin clocked 1:51.8 in the humidity and was 1.8 seconds off the winning pace.

Oak Bay Project Vetoed

Oak Bay council turned down a proposed five-storey condominium apartment and shops project for Windsor and Newport Monday night after a two-hour public information meeting.

The proposal, by Greenbank Designs Contract Division Ltd., was for a building 57 to 60 feet high. The shops would be on the first floor, a penthouse would be on top and underground parking would be provided.

An audience of about 50 ratepayers appeared evenly divided for and against the project.

Ald. Doug McLelland said the proposal was "too big and too high" as well as precedent-setting for nearby areas of Windsor Park.

Ald. John Goult said it "appears to me the time is not yet ripe that we are prepared" to accept such a proposal.

Ald. Shirley Dowell said a 45-foot building would be acceptable but not 60 feet.

Ald. Doug Watts said he is "sick and tired" of seeing the run-down property in its present condition.

"Quite frankly," he said, "if we can get one nice building like this on the corner and three more like it, great."

A move by McLelland to refer the whole matter back to committee to re-study zoning guidelines was defeated when the majority of council said they could see no point because the issue had been thoroughly discussed with three proposals from Greenbank.

Before the Judge

A 24-year-old man, who pleaded guilty to his third drug offence in the past two years, escaped a jail sentence in Victoria provincial court Monday because Judge Fred Green found he had "clearly taken some active steps" towards the changing of his lifestyle.

Defence lawyer Peter Klassen said Taylor was very drunk at the time of his arrest and the hashish had been given to him by friends at a beer parlour.

"His other criminal convictions, including the most serious one of possession for the purpose of trafficking, had also resulted from a large consumption of alcohol," Klassen said, "and while he had sold the drug on the trafficking offence, he was by no means in the business of trafficking."

Klassen told the court that since May 1, Taylor has been actively involved in the community diversion program and has volunteered his services to the Victoria Boy's Club.

"Looking at the purpose of sentence, I feel a jail term would not be appropriate in this case as it would cause him to lose his job and destroy his efforts to become a better citizen in the community," Klassen said.

Green agreed and fined Taylor $500 and placed him on 15 months probation.

Conditions of probation are that Taylor continue his association with community diversion until such time as the probation office directs otherwise and that he abstain absolutely from frequenting or being found in a beer parlour for a period of four months.

Five Saanich residents, charged June 16 with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking, elected trial by judge and jury. Preliminary hearing is set for Sept. 5.

Wayne Nelson Griese, 29, Russell William Griese, 28, and Patricia Lee Frankham, 23, all of 3598 Shelbourne, and Bill Fuller, 34, and Rhona Christine Fuller, 28, both of 3380 Rolston Crescent, were arrested following a raid by the drug squad on the Shelbourne Street home June 14.

Both Grieses and Frankham are free on their own recognizance in the sum of $3,000. Bill Fuller is free on his own undertaking to appear.

Rhona Fuller, also facing a separate charge of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking, is free on her own recognizance in the sum of $2,000. She elected trial by judge and jury on the charge and preliminary hearing has been set for the afternoon of Sept. 8.

On charges of possession of marijuana and hashish, found by police following a raid at his Rolston Crescent residence June 14, Bill Fuller again elected trial by judge and jury. Preliminary hearing is set for the morning of Sept. 8.

Sentencing was postponed to July 17 for a 26-year-old man charged with possession of marijuana and three counts of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

Ian Mortimor, of 5045 Cordova Bay Road, had pleaded guilty June 2 to the two charges. Crown withdrew the third charge of indecent assault.

Guilty Verdict

Kenneth Christian Jones, 24, of 131 Pandora, was found guilty Monday in county court of possession of LSD for the purpose of trafficking.

The conviction arose from a police raid at his home Feb. 28 when 1,900 "hits" of the drug were found in a bookcase.

Judge Montague Drake ordered a pre-sentence report and set sentencing for July 11. In the meantime, Jones continues on bail.

Jones told the court he didn't know the LSD was in his apartment, that he didn't traffic in LSD and he didn't use LSD.

He said he loaned a man named Jim McNamara $500 for an antique deal expecting to make a 40 per cent commission and only learned later it was actually for a dope deal.

Defence lawyer Del Black of Vancouver said it was simply a case of whether Jones was to be believed and if he was, he should be acquitted or at least a reasonable doubt raised.

Prosecutor Mike Hutchison said the "incredible story" of the "mysterious Mr. McNamara" was not worthy of belief, that Jones had lied to police and had a "vivid imagination and the court has been the recipient of that imagination today."

Jones admitted to past convictions for possession of a narcotic for the purpose of trafficking, possession of a narcotic and possession of a restricted drug in White Rock and possession of a narcotic in Maple Ridge.

Sooke Bus Complaints To Be Aired

Complaints about the government-run bus service between Victoria and Sooke will be aired at an "informal" meeting at Sooke Elementary school, Wednesday starting at 7:30.

Called by the government's Bureau of Transit Services, the agency is asking for comments as to how the service can be improved.

Matters already voiced from residents cover monthly passes, discount fares and changes in the schedule to suit work start and stop times in Sooke and Victoria.

The agency says it will make changes after the meeting.

Dockyard Workers Out Again

Almost 200 civilian workers at HMC Dockyard were off the job today as part of the series of rotating strikes by the Dockyard Trades and Labor Council which began June 5.

Another six employees of the Canadian Forces range station at Nanoose were also off the job and informational pickets have been set up there, an armed forces spokesman said.

The trades and labor council, covering civilian employees at federal naval dockyards in Esquimalt and Halifax, is conducting the rotating strikes in support of contract demands in negotiations with the federal treasury board.

Union members on strike at the Esquimalt dockyard today include employees from the following shops: diesel, tool and die, riggers, communications, marine wire, instruments, mechanical scheduling, hull control and electric control.

Gov't Buys $10,000 Mural

University of Victoria visual arts professor Don Harvey is headed for Nelson, B.C., in a truck with $10,000 worth of art.

He is taking his painted mural Inside and Outside — recently accepted and paid for by the province — to a new B.C. government building there.

The commissioned work was unveiled at a private UVic showing yesterday attended by Public Works Minister Bill Hartley who established the Provincial Collection last year.

Under terms of the collection, all B.C. government buildings must spend 1 per cent of construction costs on commissioned art work for those buildings, primarily by B.C. artists.

Harvey has sold about 35 works to the collection and has an international reputation.

Asked if $10,000 wasn't a lot of money for one art work Wilkinson said not for a mural.

"There's a market in the art world. If you're buying work from a mature artist who has worked to reach that point . . ."

NINE MORE COUNTRIES EXPECT TO ENTER UN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Admission of nine more countries, including North and South Vietnam, may raise membership in the United Nations to 147 next fall, a UN spokesman said Monday.

High-ranking officials from North Vietnam and the provisional revolutionary government of South Vietnam talked with Secretary General Kurt Waldheim in Mexico City last week on the procedure for gaining membership, the spokesman said.

Portugal's four former African territories—Mozambique, Angola, Cape Verde Islands and Sao Tome and Principe—lead the list of countries expected to apply for UN membership as they become independent.

Others expected are Papua New Guinea, Surinam and the Seychelles Islands.

Elbow Rooms
That's what you get on our wide-bodied jets to Toronto. Elbow Rooms. Our L-1011's have 3. And our 747's have 4.
We call our economy passenger compartments Elbow Rooms because that's what they are. Because all of our seats are 2 inches wider than anyone else's. Which may not sound like much, but it can make a big difference on a 4, 5, 6 hour flight.
You don't have to worry about that intensely polite competition with your fellow passenger's elbow on the same armrest.
And, you don't have to worry about whether or not you smoke. Because our Elbow Rooms have sections designated as smoking and non-smoking.
And, you don't have to worry about having something to do. Because we've got movies on our 747's and free stereo music on our L-1011's.
So all you have to do is get on a plane to Vancouver, make the easy connection to one of our wide-bodied jets. And relax. In an Elbow Room.

Killer of Two 'Sensitive' Boy

BRAMPTON, Ont. — Michael Slobodian's mother described her 16-year-old son to a coroner's jury Monday as a beautiful boy who would do anything to help another person.

The inquest is investigating a five-minute shooting rampage by Slobodian May 28 at Brampton Centennial High School in which teacher Margaret Wright, 25, and student John Slinger, 17, were slain and 13 others injured. The youth then killed himself.

This previously undisclosed part of the suicide note he left at home also was read in court: "I am not insane, but strictly fed up with life."

Mrs. Peter Slobidian described her son as "a very beautiful boy."

He was "a bit sensitive" and "would go out of his way to do anything for anybody, and not expect anything in return."

"I have to believe that God and Michael are the only ones to know why this had to happen."

SAN FRANCISCO — A neatly-dressed man in a fold-up chair sits on the street with a sign that says: "I am looking for a wife. Please stop and talk to me."

But instead of understanding women, the sign draws "dope addicts and alcoholics," says Donald Kizzee.

"I'm looking for someone interested in the same things I am," he says. "Beach picnics, card and domino games, television and good movies without violence."

He says he began his sidewalk wife hunt out of loneliness since his three-year, live-in companion died last month.

"It was diabetes," he says. "We were never married, but I've been very lonely ever since."

WASHINGTON — Former president Richard Nixon says he does not intend to practice law anymore, and he has been granted his wish by the U.S. supreme court to resign from the high court's bar.

CHICAGO — United Air Lines agreed Monday to pay $300,000 in damages to the estate of the late wife of Watergate burglar Howard Hunt. She died in a plane crash here Dec. 8, 1972.

He mustered all the royal courage at his command.

"My father told me if I ever met a lady in a dress like yours I must look her straight in the eyes," Prince Charles told Hampshire Monday night, adding:

"Otherwise, someone might take a photograph of me in what might appear to be a compromising attitude."

The blonde actress helped the prince out of his dilemma by cupping her hands over the most exposed extremities. He laughed.

Alice Cooper Injured

VANCOUVER (CP) — Singer Alice Cooper was injured Monday when he was caught off balance and fell to the floor during a concert at the Coliseum.

First reports indicated that the controversial singer cracked three ribs and fractured his skull, however, he did not seem disconcerted by his injuries.

He was taken to Burnaby General Hospital and released after treatment. The hospital would not disclose his injuries.

The opening number of his performance, called Welcome to My Nightmare, featured four dancers costumed in dream sequence finery and Alice writhing on a metal bed. The dancers were supposed to be locked in a large toy box at the end of the song but, as Alice slammed the lid shut, the box turned over and sent him sprawling between the stage and the guard rails.

With his head bandaged and his ribs taped, Alice tried to carry on his performance but after 30 minutes he gave up. He was then taken to hospital.

ROYAL FILM ROLE PALACE MISTAKE

LONDON (Reuter) — Buckingham Palace said Monday that a misunderstanding on its part led to newsreel shots of Queen Elizabeth being included in a fictional fim about an attempt by an embittered Irishman to blow up the British Parliament.

The film Hennessy was made in Britain by American International Pictures and is regarded as so sensitive for British audiences that two film groups, EMI and Rank, have declined to distribute it.

Rod Steiger plays a man whose child was accidentally shot by British soldiers in Belfast. With help from the Irish Republican Army, he turns himself into a huiman bomb to blow up the House of Lords during the speech from the throne read by the Queen at the opening of Parliament.

Clips bought from Movietone news by the film company show the Queen leaving Buckingham Palace and at the opening of Parliament in 1970.

The Palace was upset by reports that it asked for the newsreel shots to be deleted and was snubbed by the film company.

ROLLING STONE

By BEN FONG-TORRES

STEVIE WONDER is still working on his next album. The title may be "Thank You for Letting Me Into Your Home." We sound uncertain, and that's because we remember an album of his called "God Is Freedom" that later became "Talking Book." Anyway, we asked writer O'Connel Driscoll, who followed Stevie through a few dates and heard some working cassettes, to let us in on what may be next from Wonder.

"I'm no critic of music," Driscoll reported, "but I would characterize the songs as a continuation of his introspection into relationships — both on the personal level and on the one-member-of-mankind - to - another level. Also, there is a strong direction towards things otherworldly, as there was on the last album, but here the message seems to be taking a more spiritual (as in black southern spiritual) rather than philosophical turn. The song I like best was a thing called 'Papa Do' (There is a chorus line which goes, 'I love you more Than your own papa do . . .'), which Stevie explained was 'really' reggae, as opposed to 'Boogie On Reggae Woman.' Later, I was talking with Ira Tucker (friend and road manager) and I mentioned that particular song and said I thought it was a knockout, and Ira said, 'Yeah, that's a good tune. But I'll tell you something sad. That probably won't even make it onto the album, because he's got so many songs written and recorded . . . and they're all good'."

ELTON JOHN is sick of hearing himself on the radio. That's the gist of what he had to say to Paul Gambaccini on his BBC radio show, "Rock Week," just days after he's his Number One with "Captain Fantastic and the Brown Dirt Cowboy" in its first week on the charts, something no other artist has ever done. But in England, Elton had to settle for a Number Two debut, the top spot being occupied by "The Best of the Stylistics." Elton said he didn't mind, since the Philadelphia group is among his favorites, but he is anxious for "Philadelphia Freedom" and "Pinball Wizard" to begin moving down the charts — he had told Polydor not to issue "Pinball" from the "Tommy" soundtrack, he said — so he could release a single from "Captain Fantastic" — "Someone Saved My Life Tonight."

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE: Film producer John Taplin ("Mean Streets") is looking for someone to portray the late Buddy Holly in his next movie, "Young Bloods," which covers eight weeks in the career of Holly and the Crickets. "Ideally, we'd like an actor who can play a guitar, but we're also looking for pure pickers," he said. Slim pickers with burpy voices and horn-rimmed glasses should send taped renditions of Holly tunes, along with photos, to Taplin at 20th Century Fox, Box 900, Beverly Hills, CA 90213. The film begins shooting in August . . . An all-star band with the name KGB is rehearsing in L.A. Personnel are Michael Bloomfield, guitar; Rick Grech, bass; Barry Goldberg, keyboards; Carmine Appice, drums; and Ray Kennedy (formerly with Dave Mason and Jeff Beck), vocals . . . Plane and train strikes didn't stop Three Dog Night on their Japan tour, but they were slowed, taking buses, boats and, at one point, an eight-junk flotilla to get them to their shows . . . And, in a St. Louis summer stock version of "The Wizard of Oz," Margaret Hamilton will recreate her role as the wicked witch, while The Hudson Brothers star as the Tin Man, the Scarecrow and the Cowardly Lion . . .

PHIL SPECTOR, one of rock history's great producers (the Ronettes, the Righteous Brothers, Ike and Tina Turner, and the Beatles' "Let It Be"), is upset with the London BBC's refusal to play his production of Dion's. single, "Make the Woman Love Me." The Beeb is responding to the mention of Levi's in the song (the Kinks ran into similar difficulties over Coca Cola in "Lola"). "I ain't gonna let it happen if I have to go over and pull the BBC down," Spector threatened from his Hollywood offices. "I can't change the lyric. If they have to, let them put a beep over it." Phil's people in London are promoting the record by giving away a thousand pairs Of (beep) . . . Spector, injured in an auto accident in the middle of work on John Lennon's "Rock and Roll" album, said he was glad Lennon completed the project and released "Stand By Me," since he wrote the song with Jerry Leiber and Mike Stoller, using the pseudonym "Elmo Glick." But he doesn't know if he'll ever work again with any of the former Beatles. "I love John," he said, "but after the accident, I thought they were doing all right by themselves." As for the crackup, the only physical reminder he has now, he says, is "my nose is a little crooked."

We'll be in Washington, D.C., on the Fourth of July. Of course we'll bring sparklers, buy JFK dinnerware and generally join in on the mad celebration of our nation's 199th. But the main reason we'll be in town will be for something called "Rock and Roll Expo '75," a consumer-oriented convention with all-night movies (Elvis, the Beatles, Stones, Kinks, Who and Jimi), a disc-swap mart and, of course, panels. We'll join Chet Flippo. and Dave Marsh on one, and others are supposed to feature disc jockeys, record producers and rock stars. Well, maybe rock stars. Organizer Gary Groth admits having difficulties booking artists as panelists. "Most of the singers' managers," he said, "were appalled at the very idea of their clients actually speaking in public!"

TOWN TALK

Orange-jacketed young men are now doing their stuff with survey instruments on the Trans-Canada Highway between the Thetis Lake overpass and Tillicum, in readiness for the widening to four lanes which may start late this year.

They're a symbol of hope to those wheeled wretches who have to endure the daily crawl in the "rush hour" — pardon our hysterical mirth — on this clogged artery.

From the Thetis Lake intersection itself, where the two main streams of traffic converge, it's an everyday occurrence for vehicles to back up hundreds of yards.

But drivers from the Sooke, Colwood and Metchosin areas who thought they'd seen everything in the way of highway frustration found last Friday they hadn't.

Their creeping line stretched all the way back to Colwood's Centennial Pool, more than a mile from and nowhere in sight of the Trans-Canada.

Is it any wonder that commuters on the provincial government's new rural bus system serving the western communities complain they are arriving late for work?

Perhaps the Hon. James Lorimer (transit) will persuade the Hon. Graham Lea (highways) to do the hon. thing by the 5 m.p.h. crowd — hurry up with that widening job.

Claremont high school grads have been scrubbing up their image after four-letter words appeared on some Saanich buildings recently.

Although the words "Claremont Grads '75" were painted along with profanity, Claremont students may not have been the culprits, school spokesmen told Prospect Lake Community Association head Pat Harkness.

Nevertheless, students removed the offending scribble on the association's hall.

The writing on the wall which also appeared on Lakeside Store, Prospect Lake General Store and Lakeside Park change rooms didn't amuse Saanich police.

"It's not just a prank. It's a criminal offence," said Sgt. Ken Gale.

CALLAN

Ed Callan, former business agent and international representative of the International Union of Operating Engineers, has been accorded a lifetime membership, capping 27 years of service to Victoria-based Local 918.

He joined the local in 1948 when it had only 14 members, served on its executive, became a staff member, and from 1957 to his retirement last September was international representative for B.C. and Alberta.

Aside from the prestige—what are the benefits, he was asked.

"It means I won't have to pay any more union dues," Ed replied.

Oyez, oh no . . . it's another proclamation of yet another special "week." This time, from Mayor Peter Pollen at City Hall, we learn that it's "Hire a Student Week."

All citizens are urged to "co-operate fully with the Canada Manpower Centre for Students which is charged with the responsibility for this most imprtant work."

So come on, everybody, let's hire a student. You don't need one, you say? Well how about hiring one and asking him or her to do an in-depth feasibility study on hiring students?

The question put to the Grade 5 class at Vic West Elementary was: Now that corporal punishment (strapping) has been banned how do you feel teachers should deal with discipline problems?

"Students should be punished for smoking, they should be strapped for lieing;" Tom.

"If they are bad give them another chance, if they are still bad give them a detention;" Patrick.

"Call the parents and tell the parents that when the child is smartened up, you may bring him back," Debra.

"Talk to the person nicely and tell them what they should have done;" Cheryl.

He lost his wallet on the Shawnigan-Port Renfrew Road and the first thing he thought was "what about all those credit cards?"

So, early Monday he notified all companies (about 15 and most of them have head offices in the east). No sooner was he off the phone when the RCMP called and said a motorist saw the wallet at the side of the road and turned it in — credit cards and all.

So back to the phone (long distance) and tell the head offices to cancel the cancellation of the cards.

He should have had faith in his fellow man.

Young said the fishermen tied up in Bamfield used the day to paint the Bamfield community hall and to help the municipality top the trees.

Elizabeth Watling, 72, recent winner of the Canadian Council of the Blind's 1976 Woman of the Year award, has two bits of advice for the sighted.

"If you're serving tea, don't ask somebody else whether the blind person takes cream and sugar," she said. That's just one of the ways well-meaning but ignorant people embarrass her, she said.

People often forget their blind companions in conversation can't see when they move off, said Mrs. Watling.

President of Victoria's White Cane Club since its inception in 1929, she now lives alone in a Humboldt St. apartment and spends most of her energy helping the more han 400 blind persons in the city.

The award she will receive next year is her second — she was given a medal in 1973 from the native Sons of B.C. for her extensive social work.

Tennis Courts Okayed

A last-ditch attempt by Ald. Doug McLelland to stop a joint Oak Bay-Greater Victoria school board proposal for tennis courts at Oak Bay junior high school near the Oak Bay Recreation Centre was defeated by council Monday night.

Mayor Brian Smith was authorized by council to go ahead with an agreement with the school board for the proposal, which will also include tennis courts at Willows elementary school.

The proposal involves eight courts, four of them indoor in an inflatable vinyl bubble behind Oak Bay junior high plus parking for 44 cars.

Oak Bay has budgeted $357,000 but this includes a grant of $101,000 from the provincial government. The school board will provide the land and pay for the salaries of any personnel involved during the time it uses the courts.

McLelland said residents will "think we have lost our marbles, our fiscal credibility will be zero" to enter yet another major capital investment.

'Lies' in Tenant Circular Barred by Rental Agency

A rental agency spokesman claimed today that circulars being distributed by the Capital Region Tenants Association contain "out and out lies."

This is the main reason, he said, he refused permission to have them circulated in apartments run by his company.

Gordon Brown of Brown Bros. Agencies Ltd. at 1125 Blanshard was approached Monday by CRTA president Mrs. Ann Tarasoff. She and other members of her group had been refused permission by managers of apartments run by Brown's company to canvass the tenants on Sunday.

The circulars, prepared by the B.C. Tenants Association of Vancouver with the assistance of a $10,000 grant from the Rent Review Commission, urge tenants to attend a BCTA public hearing, at the Centennial Square senior citizens centre Wednesday from 2 to 5 p.m.

Brown said he was not concerned about the public hearing but about two particular statements made in the pamphlet.

One reads:

Brown said this might be true of some of the highrises in Vancouver and, perhaps, of apartments in Chilliwack, Kelowna and other mainland areas but unjustified here.

"It's an out and out lie," Brown said. "It's just not true. One building we manage is owned by a Chinese that works 24 hours a day in a grocery store. Another is owned by a Chinese who works 24 hours a day in a butcher shop."

Brown also took exception to a statement in the pamphlet that rents are eating up as much as 60 per cent of some tenants' incomes and were rising higher than operating costs.

17% Pay Hike Likely For Senior City Staff

Senior, non-union staff at Victoria City Hall will probably receive a 17 per cent across-the-board salary increase this year.

Mayor Peter Pollen said this morning a recommendation to that effect would be placed before city council's regular caucus meeting for endorsement later today.

The increase, retroactive to April 1, would parallel the immediate 17 per cent boost which most of the city's inside workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, received in their recent contract settlement.

But the CUPE employees also receive a further three per cent step up Oct. 1, and Pollen declined to say whether council will consider a similar fall increase for the city's 35-union exempt personnel.

If council decided against such a move, the senior staff would fall further behind their union colleagues in terms of salary increases. In recent years they have trailed by only about one-half to one per cent.

When asked this morning on what basis the 17 per cent proposal was worked out, Pollen joked: "We argued for eight hours (at a meeting with personnel director Terry Fitzpatrick and Colin Crisp, assistant to the city manager, on Monday) and ended up flipping a coin."

But he added that the figure was considered "reasonable" in light of the already-agreed union increases. The package to be recommended for adoption today would include "a couple of minor anomaly adjustments," he added.

Pollen also said that once the increase takes effect, city manager Jim Bramley will be asked to review the senior staff salaries "with a view to making sure that these are in line with senior management positions in other levels of government and in industry."

Management staff who continued to toil during the Oak Bay lockout of employees for three months earlier this year were rewarded by council Monday night.

They will get an average payment of about $1,200 each plus an extra week of holiday.

The precise amounts paid to each individual non-union person will not be disclosed, Mayor Brian Smith said today.

Different amounts will be paid depending on the individual hours put in and the different strains involved, he said.

It will not "in any way" compensate them on an overtime basis but "does recognize they did have not only long hours but extra strains and pressures."

Development Freeze Looms in C. Saanich

Central Saanich council will vote in two weeks on a motion to freeze all land development which requires zoning changes until after a community plan has been prepared.

Notice of the motion was served Monday night by Ald. David Hill at a meeting of council's subdivision and zoning committee. Aldermen will vote on it at their next council meeting, July 7.

Hill's resolution calls for council to declare a moratorium on any further land-use contract zoning amendments or any other change of permitted land use until the community has a community plan.

All areas of the Capital district are preparing community plans to complement the official regional plan passed last year.

Consultants hired by Central Saanich are expected to bring a draft community plan before council in September, Mayor Jean Butler said today.

BUTLER

She said she will support the resolution because for council to approve zone changes at this point constitutes piecemeal planning.

If council approves the resolution, it would stall among other projects a proposal to develop 850 to 900 homes on 200 acres east of Tod Inlet.

BAMC Development Corp, subsidiary of a Winnipeg firm, Genstar, has held informal discussions with council.

Wheeet! Warble! Signal for Blind

And if Erol Hembroff has his way, 80 Victoria intersections will soon be warbling and whistling at passersby in a program planned to prevent death or injury to the city's blind.

★ ★ ★

Installed in 1973, the whistle has received a lot of favorable comment from the blind, said CNIB administrator Isobel Beveridge.

Hembroff, a B.C. government computer programmer, wants to cut down the danger he and other sightless walkers constantly face.

"I find we are playing a bit of Russian roulette every time we cross the street," he said.

The current proposal for audible signals — "wobbly" whistles at east-west crossings and steady whistles at north-south ones — was worked out by Hembroff and city traffic technician Andy Jansen.

The automatic system would cost $4,000 for 80 separate corners.

"It's a small sum of money and it's economically and humanely justified," said Hembroff who has offered to pay for 10 per cent of the bill and seek sponsors to bring that to 50 per cent.

The city would then only have to put up $2,000.

He's put a time limit of January, 1977, on his $400 offer.

"It only takes three seconds to get killed and it shouldn't take more than 18 months to try to prevent it."

The project could go hand-in-hand with the curb ramping for the blind which is costing Victoria $15,000, he said.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 20-year-old college junior. I made a bad mistake in my freshman year. I wanted to be popular so I gave in to several guys on the first date, hoping one would like me enough to stay with me. None did, and all I got was a lousy reputation.

About five months ago, a dude who was really neat started to notice me. I made up my mind that I would play hard to get with him because being easy got me nowhere. The first time he asked me out I fought it and fought it but gave in because I wanted to see him again. He never called me after that. I wanted to see him so much, I called him, but he always made excuses so he wouldn't have to see me.

He is the only guy I really felt anything for, Abby. How can I get him to realize that if I have him, I wouldn't look at another dude?

I think about him night and day. I can't sleep or study. I'm going crazy. Please tell me how to get another chance with him.—Heartsick.

DEAR HEARTSICK: Sorry, but there is no way to get a guy to see you, date you or even give you a second glance if he's not interested. You blew it when you gave in to him. Bed hopping is not the way to get a man. Counseling is available on your campus, so please take advantage of it. You need more help than I can give you in a letter.

DEAR ABBY: My brother is dating a widow. Her daughter is going to be married soon, and my brother has been asked to give the bride away.

The bride-to-be has been living with her fiance for two years, so there is nothing to "give away," and everyone knows it. Under the circumstances, my brother is concerned over the propriety of accepting this dubious honor.

I'd appreciate an answer in your column. We all read it, without complications. Thank you.—Sis.

DEAR SIS: The custom of "giving away" the bride need not be taken literally. Your brother would be standing in for the bride's father. He should be complimented, not critical. (P.S. Should he refuse, he would be giving himself away.)

Lousy Reputation From Giving In

A CHILD LEARNS TO SWIM

This is the next to last lesson in teaching your child to swim.

You've taught him to think of himself as Freddie Frog and how Freddie became a submarine searching for sunken treasure. Your child has a mind picture of his body as a submarine, complete with front and rear motors — his legs and hands.

Now's the time to teach him to count leg motions in time to the motions of his hands. The proper count is six leg beats to one stroke of each of his arms — what is known as the six beat crawl. The child can be taught to complete one crawl sequence, raise his head to breathe, then repeat the sequence.

You might tell him now he's almost a submarine. In the last lesson you'll show him how to breathe and keep swimming. Then he'll be a full-fledged submarine, able to swim and breathe at the same time. He'll be able to watch for treasure all the time he's moving through the water.

Representation in Government Said Women's Chief Struggle

VANCOUVER (CP) — "Four years ago, I started with the naive idea that we would simply persuade the government to implement the 167 recommendations of the royal commission report on the status of women in Canada and then go back to our normal lives," says Joan Wallace, who served as president of the Vancouver Status of Women (VSW) for its first two years.

"It soon became clear that even if the government implemented every one of those recommendations tomorrow, we would still not have equal rights because we would still have no voice in writing the laws that govern our lives.

"Until we have equal representation at all levels of government we will remain supplicants, pleading for favors," she said.

"So we fight on."

The fight here began in January, 1971, when the Vancouver Status of Women was formed to combat discrimination against women. Its first goal was for government action on recommendations on the royal commission report.

When the federal government granted $1,900 to the group, telephone service received top priority. It was needed by Rosemary Brown, now NDP MLA for Vancouver-Burrard who worked from her home.

This service was the first direct assistance VSW offered to women.

Today VSW staff advise women on their legal rights and procedures in such matters as separation, divorce, child custody, property and legal change of name.

They listen to appeals from battered wives and, besides counselling in the VSW office, often accompany women to court.

The staff of six full-time and three part-time workers includes an ombuswoman and assistant; a membership coordinator who keeps in touch with 800 members and interest groups around the province; a member who keeps the public informed through talks to schools and women's groups; a newspaper editor in charge of producing the monthly publication, Kinesis, and a bookkeeper accountant.

The group exists on grants, "and we are, of course, experiencing that uneasiness familiar to all those who depend on grants," says Jo Lazenby, editor of Kinesis.

"Grants make us so dependent. We spend so much time scrambling for money and worrying about whether we'll get it."

One project planned is an audio-visual library that Jo Lazenby says would solve one of the communications problems among women in the province. United Community Services has set aside some funds for the project.

VSW receives requests for speakers and information from groups throughout British Columbia, but the staff is too small to fill all requests, she said.

The organization hopes to set up the audio-visual library of tapes, slides amd films on women's needs and services and to lend to schools and women's groups.

A series of workshops for high-schools covering women and the law, the treatment of women by the media and sex-role stereotyping, are also in the planning stage, Miss Lazenby says.

Kinesis, VSW's newspaper, is published once a month to keep women in touch with the aims and achievements of the membership. It points out discriminatory areas and tells readers which government department or MLA to contact to press for remedial action.

In addition, there are meetings of a letter lobby group, communication workshops, consciousness-raising and orientation meetings for new or prospective members, open house and federal action committees.

'Shaky' At First On Job

OTTAWA (CP) — For policewoman Judy Hulsam, her first six months in the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) were "just a little bit shaky."

She told an audience at the Ottawa Public Library that the first reaction of male officers was that policewomen should not get equal pay because they would get all the "soft jobs."

She soon proved them wrong and after her training period at the Aylmer, Ont., police college she patrolled alone in her cruiser and worked the same shifts as the other constables.

Constable Hulsam says that now, a year later, most of her co-workers have "softened."

"Generally, we're accepted but it's going to take them a while to get used to it completely."

Her brother is also a policeman, and she says she knew what she was getting into.

Constable Hulsam says that being a woman is not much of a disadvantage in police work, although two drivers told her that "because I was a woman I had no right giving them a ticket."

'Prisoner of 4 Walls'

OTTAWA (CP) — "I had a fear of being a prisoner of four walls for the rest of my life," said Helen Foss. That fear was enough to make her leave a well-paid job as a teletype operator and learn to drive a bus.

One of only five women among the 1,100 bus drivers in Ottawa, Miss Foss was a little afraid of the job. She wasn't sure she would be a good driver and didn't know the city well.

"Then I remembered a newspaper picture of the then Princess Elizabeth driving an army truck during the war and I thought if she could do it, then why couldn't I."

During her probationary period she took a considerable drop in pay, she said, but it was worth it. The job lets her meet a variety of people and gives her the satisfaction of knowing "you're doing something not everyone can do."

Best of all, the job got her out of the windowless teletype room she used to work in. Her "40-foot monster," as she calls her bus, gives her an ever-changing view.

Miss Foss says she is treated equally in every respect by the 1,095 male bus drivers.

By Dr. WILLLIAM J. WELCH

When confronted by an earnest, "Should I be taking vitamins?" or "What vitamins do you recommend, doctor?" most busy practitioners, who know perfectly well that a healthy adult or even a mediocre diet does not need a vitamin supplement, more often than not will prescribe a vitamin preparation, if only to avoid a fruitless discussion of the facts.

He knows from experience that if he does not come through, his patients will shop around until they find a doctor who will. Or at worst, they will run the risk of an unduly enthusiastic, over-the-counter transaction that could result in overdosing with a vitamin that can cause serious illness.

It is almost impossible, thanks to the power of modern advertising folklore, to convince contemporary Americans that vitamin supplements are not the answer to the "droops," insomnia, anxiety, depression — you name it.

And it is even more difficult to convince them that overdosing with Vitamin A and Vitamin D can cause serious illness and even death.

My grandfather, overwhelmed by the barnside and newspaper patent-medicine advertising of his day, must have had the same difficulty with patients who insisted on bolting pink-pills-for-pale-people or throwing back bar-sized belts of Dr. Pierce's golden-medical-discovery and favorite - prescription - for - weak-women.

At least he had the comfort of knowing that the fabrication of the latter had the redeeming feature of requiring the entire output of a whisky distillery to float his healing ingredients down the gullet of eager devotees.

No such redeeming feature informs the indiscriminate popping of vitamins by the present-day, gullible seekers of medical miracles.

And the situation of helpless infants and children is even worse. There is simply no way of persuading young mothers that vitamin drops can be overdone.

When the American Academy of Pediatrics a few years ago suggested that babies and children should receive little or no vitamin supplementation, it was as if they had not spoken. Doctors who know better continue to allow themselves to be cornered into recommending vitamin drops for nearly every infant.

It is appalling to add up, for example, the multiples of daily requirements of Vitamin D forced down the throats of helpless infants and children with their "fortified" cereals, souped-up baby food, vitamin-rich milk or formula plus their vitamin drops.

It has been reported that at least one conscientious drug company, in admirable effort to square the circle, has produced a vitamin drop for infants that has very few vitamins in it.

It is equally difficult to overestimate the hoax that is being played on the susceptible by the solemn insistence, among the health faddists, for "organic" vitamns. As if all Vitamin C, which is so labelled, were not by law required to be ascorbic acid whether it is "synthetic" or extracted from what one wit described as "rose hips grown in composted Tibetan yak manure."

Whipped up and cheered on by television commercials, crowing piously about having their health thanks to vitamin popping, and thus having everything, few listeners get to hear the actual facts.

Indeed the sales of vitamins soar even more thanks to the megavitamin crowd. It took one Nobel laureate's paperback recommendation of mega-doses of Vitamin C for the common cold to send the sales of ascorbic acid kiting to new astronomic levels.

In the opinion of one observer, you have to believe that nature must have been terribly wrong, if all along we really have needed the equivalent of two crates of oranges and a basket of tomatoes every day to stay well.

Market Comes Alive With Survival Books

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

With the surge of interest in independence, first-time farming, and just plain survival, a number of old books plus several new ones on the subject of wild foods have become available.

As all of the books agree, it is virtually impossible to starve to death on this planet if you have some knowledge of what foods are good to eat.

Acorns were one of the basic foods for many Indian tribes. They are as nutritious today as they were 10 centuries ago and no more difficult to prepare.

There are many types of acorns, ranging from the big sweet nutmeats that fall from Eastern oaks to the small, bitter acorns of the Western live oak.

Sweet acorns can be consumed as is, just like any nutmeat. However, if there is any bitterness to any of the acorns that you collect, boil them for two hours and pour off the water. Soak again in cool water with occasional changes. If there's a stream running through your farm, put the acorns in a mesh sack, anchor them to the sandy bottom with a big rock and let the flowing water do your work.

After a few days, grind the acorns into a paste. This paste may be made into a mush by mixing half-and-half with water and cooking it. Adding wild blueberries or blackberries plus a little thick cream makes this a fine dish for breakfast, lunch or dinner.

If you can't eat it all at one sitting, spread the paste out on a clean board or rock and let it dry. You can then regrind it as acorn flour. Use this flour in the same way as any conventional flour.

Cattails, also called elephant grass (typha), has been called by wild food expert Euell Gibbons "the supermarket of the swamps." Cattails are distributed worldwide and grow along the shores of lakes, ponds and the backwaters of rivers.

Virtually every part of this friendly plant can be eaten. The young growing shoots are succulent and nutritious when eaten raw or boiled like gourmet asparagus. The root stalks are the most nutritious part of the cattail.

The best time for collecting these goodies is late in the fall and through the winter to early spring.

At this time roots have the most food value.

To prepare the root stalks for food, peel off the outer covering and grate, chop or grind the white inner part. You can eat them raw, or boiled and served with lots of butter and a bit of sesame salt and pepper.

The yellow pollen which appears at flowering time can be cooked as a cereal, mixed with water and baked as small cakes or steamed as a primitive but delicious bread.

Wild apple trees are abundant, The majority are trees that grew from seeds scattered by pioneers who tossed their apple cores or by birds who ingested a seed or two tnd then seeded from the air. Other sources of wild apples are from abandoned orchards which may be found frequently by the back country roamer.

Wild apples don't look anything like the big, well-preserved, and preservative-coated specimens you find in supermarkets. They are usually small, dotted with insect holes and slightly tart.

Wild grapes the world over are not only edible but delicious. Being rich in natural sugars, they should be one of the wild foods that you seek diligently. Incidentally, if you're out searching for wild foods and get thirsty, you can cut a grapevine stem and collect fresh water from it with any container.

Edible pine nuts are one of the most subtly delicious of wild foods. Peasants in Siberia have been known to subsist solely on pine nuts in winter.

The nuts are produced in woody cones which appear at the base of the cone scales. When the nuts are mature, they will fall out of the cone if you shake it, and may be eaten raw or roasted over a hot outdoor fire.

Wild onions emit a characteristic oniony odor, so it's easy to distinguish them from other kinds of bulbous plants. They occur widely throughout North America in both moist and arid regions. They may be used just like the onions you grow on your farm. Sliced and fried with potatoes, you'll find wild onions a rare and appealing treat.

Would you like something sweet, delicious and healthful that you can gather free? Gather the edible young shoot of the agave or century plant. It grows in many desert and semi-tropical areas. Cut off the ne wshoot and roast it . . . you'll find the molasses-colored layers as delicious as anything you've ever eaten. If you find lots of them, slice them in one-inch pieces, dry in the sun and they'll keep for years.

A gourmet treat that sells for unbelievably high prices is wild rice. It grows in swampy, marshy regions and is easily identified by its broad, rough leaves and the hairy, straw-colored cover out of which the wild rice grains shatter when ripe.

Wild rice may be used in every way that domestic rice is prepared. An additional benefit is that when dry, it will keep for many years.

Added to your farm production of fruits, vegetables and meat, these free foods can provide much variety, interest and fun, not to mention cash savings.

Bride Delays Arrest

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (UPI) — Brenda Van Vels Evans was angry because it was her wedding and her new father-in-law was getting all the attention.

"This is my wedding, if you don't mind," a tearful Mrs. Evans cried out as two Palm Beach County sheriff's deputies arrested Nelson Roy Mulligan, father of bridegroom Douglas Evans, on charges of failing to pay more than $115,000 in alimony and child support to his former wife.

The deputies waited until the end of the wedding ceremony before arresting Mulligan. But the wedding party was less than receptive as they approached the receiving line.

Cleaner Makes Her Point

REGINA (CP) — A Saskatchewan Human Rights Commission equal pay hearing continues following presentation of evidence that a female cleaner found it possible to do the work of a male caretaker at the University of Regina.

Pictures of cleaning equipment used by caretakers at the university and conflicting views on whether female cleaners are capable of operating these machines came before the commission.

The university pays caretakers, most of them men, more than cleaners who are all women.

By breaking two rules governing her employment as a cleaner, Rose Ell, one of four female witnesses, discovered she could perform two duties normally performed by caretakers.

Ell stepped outside her cleaners' role when she operated a machine which polishes floors and when she climbed on a stool to wash walls.

Ell said she was told a ladder "was for men only". Women were told "we might fall off," she added.

Rewards for Chores May Be Backfiring

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Those few dollars given a son or daughter for helping with yard or house work may cause them to hate doing it, a psychology professor says.

Prof. John McCullers, University of Oklahoma department of psychology chairman, is conducting a research experiment to last about six years on possible bad effects of rewards.

The project applies to rewards such as bonuses for employees, gold stars for students or candy for children. The principle has been seen as "the great panacea for the past 30 to 40 years," he said.

★

"For years and years everyone has been talking about the good effects of reward," he said. "I think reward might be regarded as something like a drug. It has certain beneficial effects, but it's possible it may have detrimental effects."

He said rewards seem to kill the inborn motivation the person has for doing the work and to hamper his performance, possibly because he is thinking about the reward.

"A young child is just very anxious to be competent in the eyes of the parent. He wants to ride the bicycle, push the lawn mower, operate the typewriter. You can scarcely keep him away from it," he said.

"After he pesters the father enough, he says, 'I'll let you take a try with the lawn mower.' A few months later he lets him mow the grass. The next step is to offer him something for it. Shortly after that he doesn't want to do it."

★

McCullers began the project about two years ago and has received a $56,000 National Institute of Mental Health grant from May until mid-1978.

He conducts experiments in a laboratory in which he rewards children with a coin or candy and adults with a few dollars for performing tasks.

"It does have very interesting detrimental effects on a lot of things. It affects their interest in the tasks. They make more errors," he said.

"The effect is much stronger in those cases when we move off into more thinking, reasoning, problem-solving type tasks. As we go that way what we find its detrimental effects," he said.

Caution on Food Poisoning

OTTAWA (CP) — About 400,000 Canadians a year suffer the affects of food poisoning, the director of the federal health protection branch says.

Dr. A. B. Morrison told a meeting of the Canadian Food Executive Association that many of these cases are mistaken for indigestion or stomach flu. But sometimes incidents involving a large number of people come to the attention of department epidemiologisits, he said.

He cited a recent episode in a large city where 100 of 150 guest sat a party became ill from perfingens food poisoning, caused by a type of bacteria.

"The culprit was a beef stew, contaminated with Clostridium perfingens, that the caterer had held for a few hours in a warming oven at a temerature ideal for bacterial growth."

Dr. Morrison, an assistant deputy health minister, also referred to the case of the passenger of a Japanese airliner who contracted food poisoning during a flight to Europe. The source of the poisoning was tentatively traced to the blistered hand of a cook who handled preparation of the food, he said.

But the cooks and the airline were probably also at fault because the food was stored for a total of 26 hours at temperatures which were not high enough to kill bacteria or low enough to prevent their growth, he said.

He urged food service operators to take care in the preparation and handling of food to prevent similar outbreaks.

"It is also the industry's responsibility to ensure a high degree of integrity is maintained by its members — integrity that doesn't allow or tolerate the slippery or shoddy operator. . . ."

He said the government has set standards on microbial content of specific foods and is considering recommending regulations to cover manufacturing practices in the food service area. These areas fall largely in municipal and provincial jurisdictions.

These regulations would govern the storage time and temperature of potentially hazardous foods, he said.

Parenthood Training Said Lacking in U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — We shape the training of teenagers in everything from physical fitness to careers to come. But we leave a big gap where training counts the most if the family structure is to survive.

We neglect education for parenthood.

Yet teen marriages are multiplying and with them the problems of young parents not prepared for responsibilities of child rearing.

Statistics show that one in every 10 17-year-old girls in the U.S. is a mother. In 1974 about 220,000 girls aged 17 or under gave birth, 15 per cent of them for the second or third time. Such early childbearing means greater health risks than having children after 20.

"Early childbearing also frequently leads to early marriages, repeated pregnancies, unstable family life and welfare dependency," says a new publication which examines training for parenthood — or lack of training.

"Wed or unwed," it says, "teenage parents are apt to cut short their schooling and acquire only marginal work skills. Their prospects are dim."

The U.S. divorce rate for those married in their teens is three to four times higher than for any other age group. Nine per cent of teenage mothers attempt suicide, seven times the national rate for teen girls who have no children, says the publication, "Preparing Tomorrow's Parents."

The publisher is the Public Affairs Committee, Inc., a nonprofit educational organization headquartered in New York. The author is Elizabeth Ogg, who writes on many sociological subjects.

Mrs. Ogg cites such examples, where lack of training created problems, as the teenage mother who insists her child should not eat if he isn't toilet trained by age one and one-half. A toddler who accidentally falls over a sidewalk cellar door is spanked by his mother. A young father hits his seven-month-old baby for pulling the nipple off his bottle.

Says Mrs. Ogg, "swamped with responsibilities they haven't bargained for and don't know how to handle, and often cut off from opportunities for their own further development, they vent their frustrations on their youngsters."

Inadequate parenting is one of the reasons for emotional and physical abuse of children, says Mrs. Ogg. "Most shocking of all, at least 700 children are killed every year by their parents or parent substitutes."

But some private groups and government are doing something about education for parents. She cited a save the children federation project in Lincoln County, W. Va., that trains teenagers as child advocates. The teens visit preschoolers and parents in their homes, bringing educational games, toys and books with them.

The National Federation of Settlements and Neighborhood Centers, which concentrates on low income urban youth, includes rap sessions with film showings and guest speakers, plus observation field trips, outings and parties to help create a group feeling.

In its three-pilot programs, Boys' Clubs of America teaches video taping for programs on various aspects of childhood and preparation for parenthood.

Woman Heads YMCA

EDMONTON (CP) — Most people look twice when they meet the new president of the Young Men's Christian Association (YMCA). The president is a woman.

Raynell Andreychuk, 30, was elected president of the national council of the YMCA May 31 after serving as vice-president for just more than four months.

The Moose Jaw lawyer now has a schedule that keeps her up until almost 3 a.m. most nights.

As well as her work as president of the YMCA and serving on several of its boards, she tends to her private law practice, works as Crown prosecutor and teaches law at the University of Saskatchewan.

Miss Andreychuck asks another question when questioned about her social life: "What social life?"

The new president is also a member of the federal government's advisory council on volunteerism, a member of a University of Regina committee studying aims and directions of the university and a director for legal aid services.

"I'm going to have to be very selective in choosing my cases now," she says.

In Edmonton representing the federal government as an observer at the United Ways of Canada biennial conference, Miss Andreychuk talked to reporters about her role as president of the YMCA for the next two years.

She defended the Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) from suggestions that the organization is sexist and chauvinistic.

Female-only programs don't have to be sexist when they are being supportive to women, she said.

Miss Andreychuk, a member of the board of directors of the YWCA, said the group wishes to remain autonomous and in a position where it can act most productively to help women.

She said her nomination and unopposed election as YMCA president were no token gestures in recognition of International Women's Year.

DIET CHANGE SUGGESTED

LONDON (UPI) — A number of the painful and disturbing diseases of man can be helped by simple changes in the diet prevalent in western countries, according to papers read at the annual congress of the Royal Society of Health.

Prof. D. P. Burkitt said appendicitis, tumors of the large intestine, hemorrhoids, varicose veins and hiatus hernia were found less frequently in rural communities in Africa and India where a coarse diet was the norm. And more frequently in more advanced societies.

He told the congress that these diseases were associated with constipation and with the slow transit of food through the body.

Since Africans and Indians who move to western diet areas begin to get the same incidence of the maladies as anyone else, Burkitt said it became essential to study that diet.

"The main dietary changes accompanying economic development," he said, "are an increase of protein, fat and particularly of sugar and a change in the nature of the carbohydrate foods eaten. This change is the result of the removal of the starch and sugar from its fibrous matrix as in the refining of flour and extraction of sugar. This reduction in the fibre content of the food is the major dietary change accompanying westernization."

Burkitt, who is famous for describing the African cancer known as Burkitt's Lymphoma, recommended adding fibre to the western diet while research continues into the specific causes of the diseases he mentioned.

"Relative to cost and ease of consumption, cereal fibre seems to be the most effective," he said. "Unless white bread can be replaced by whole meal bread and eaten liberally, probably the best solution would be the addition of fibre to food in the form of wheat bran, about two or four heaped soup spoons a day. Fibre-rich proprietary breakfast cereals are effective but more expensive. Large amounts of potatoes, about a pound a day, are also effective but much more difficult to consume. A much greater quantity of fruit or green vegetables is required for a comparable effect.

"Adding fibre in these amounts to the diets is always beneficial and no ill effects have been demonstrated . . ."

Hotels Hang In With Free Sleep

NEW YORK (WP) — Some of the best things in life are free, they say. Well, a knowing grandmother, mother and daughter can test that out at any Hilton or Sheraton hotel. Both chains have a children-any-age-sleep-free policy, wtich means that a three-generation trio can check into a room at the single rate.

Both chains say they have mulled over the possible comic situations that could develop and both say they will stand by their children-sleep-free policy — come hell or three generations.

"We had to smooth the way for a very youthful-looking father with a very sophisticated looking daughter," a Hilton spokesman recalled, and the story of the 84-year-old mother who claimed a free children's rate for her 62-year-old child in the Rome Hilton is still getting laughs on the hotel grapevine.

The Hilton and Sheraton chains are old-timers of the children-sleep-free movement, which is now gaining momentum in the hotel-motel industry. The competition from budget motel chains and the gray economic picture has spurred major hotel-motel chains to woo family traffic with special lures and discounts.

Free for the Asking

Do you know why fair-skinned people tan more slowly and more easily get a burn than people with a dark complexion? And do you know why very light-skinned people just burn and never get a tan?

You'll find the answer in the 16-page bilingual booklet The Sun and Your Skin. In addition, you will learn that geography, environment, time of day and time of year also influence the amount of sunshine you can take without harm.

Because there are so many different suntan preparations on the market, it is important for you to rea dt helabel before you use any of them. Some lubriaate and moisturize the skin and thereby minimize the skin-drying process while you are in the sun. Chemical sunscreens absorb those ultraviolet rays which cause sunburn but allow tanning rays to reach the skin.

'Taken Your Pill?' Common Cry in China

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — "Have you taken your pill?" is said to be a common cry in China, where nearly a quarter of the earth's estimated four billion population lives.

Reporting this, Han Suyin, Peking-born novelist and surgeon, says birth control and taking of the pill in China are community responsibilities rather than the private affair of the bedroom.

"In the fields and communes they have a system whereby one woman is responsible every day for calling out to the others, 'Have you taken your pill?'" she said in an interview circulated by the United Nations Educational, Social and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

The responsible woman "carries supplies with her and if somebody has forgotten, they get their pill," said Dr. Han. "This is solidarity. You can't do it by order, but only when the population is pulling together."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♣	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

West's opening lead of the club king was ruffed by South, after which a trump was led to dummy's nine-spot. A second club lead was then ruffed by South.

Next came the 10 of trumps to the board's jack, picking up West's last trump enroute. The ace of clubs was now cashed, declarer discarding the diamond three, and this was followed by the ruffing of dummy's remaining club. On this trick East discarded a heart.

The ace of hearts was then cashed, after which a heart was led to South's king. Now came the key play: Declarer played his ace of diamonds. South's remaining heart was next ruffed in dummy.

At this point West was known to have started with six clubs (East had failed to follow suit to the fourth round), three hearts, and two spades. Therefore he could not have started with more than two diamonds (and he had followed suit when declarer had cashed the diamond ace).

So declarer led a diamond off dummy, and when East put up the eight, declarer inserted his queen. West won the trick with his king — and, simultaneously, became the victim of an end-play, since he had no option but to play back a club. When he did, declarer ruffed the trick in dummy while he discarded the remaining diamond from his own hand.

Had declarer taken the diamond finesse anywhere along the line (as opposed to laying down the diamond ace first), West would have captured the trick with his king. He would then have played back the diamond then, and eventually declarer would have lost a diamond trick to East's jack.

The reader will note that even if East had been the possessor of the diamond king, declarer's line of play would have fulfilled the contract. On the diamond lead-off dummy, if East had put up his (presumed) king, declarer's queen would have been promoted into a winner; and if East, the possessor of the (hypothetical) king, declined to play that card, declarer's queen would have won the trick.

Scientists Fear Ice Cap Melting

OTTAWA (CP) — Some scientists believe the Antarctic ice sheet may be disintegrating, that large parts of it may slip into the ocean and raise worldwide sea levels nearly 20 feet, flooding major coastal cities.

A similar, but smaller ice sheet covered Hudson Bay 8,000 years ago. It disintegrated in 400 years, remarkably fast in geological time, and flooded much of Central Canda.

The Antarctic ice sheet is exhibiting characteristics that scientists feel the Hudson Bay sheet had before its collapse.

Essentially, the ice is coming in contact with relatively warm water that causes it to move out faster than it normally would

It extends itself over the water, which melts it from underneath, and the weight of the ice at the end breaks off into hugh icebergs. This forms a central channel of warm water which gradually breaks the hole ice sheet into icebergs.

The ice sheet covering Antarctica is about the size of Europe and in some places is three miles thick. The western half is considered unstable because it rests mainly in water, as the Hudson Bay ice sheet did.

A hole drilled though 7,200 feet of ice at Byrd Station, Antarctica, has shown a layer of slushy ice near the water. Radar probing of the ice has revealed many "lakes" of warm water which are melting the ice from underath.

If this ice sheet did crumble and move into the oceans, some scientists say, its white surface would reflect a lot of sunlight back into space, cooling the atmosphere probably starting another ice age.

The amount of this ice is hard to comprehend.

"What you must understand is that it takes thousands of years for such huge ice masses to form. There was a sheet of ice two miles thick on Hudson Bay that weighed so much that it pressed the surrounding land down at least 2,500 feet," said Victor K. Prest of the Geological Survey of Canada.

He said the land around the bay has risen only 1,500 feet in the last 8,500 years and it must rise another 1,000 to 1,500 feet to regain its former level. When it does rise, much of Hudson Bay and all of James Bay will be land again.

"We have evidence that the bottoms of these two bays have large river channels and evidences of lake bottoms. This is probably what it will return to."

Mr. Prest said that unless there is a dramatic climatic change, the crumbling of the Antarctic ice sheet will take much longer than the crumbling of the one on Hudson Bay.

"It's a lot colder there and I don't think the ice will move so rapidly," he said. "However, if there was a climatic change, not only would the Antarctic ice sheet break up, so would some of the huge glaciers in Greenland and Iceland."

The United States government is said to have considered in the 1960s the possibility that some country might use nuclear explosions to break up the Antarctic ice sheet.

Dr. Gordon J. F. MacDonald, former executive vice-president of the Institute for Defence Analyses in Washington, said this would create gigantic tidal waves "that would completely wreck coastal regons even in the nothern hemisphere."

Cauliflower, Broccoli Going Blind

Home gardeners are having a problem this year not usually encountered; cauliflower and broccoli plants going "blind."

A blind cauliflower is a plant which produces masses of coarse leaves but fails to make the head of white or cream flower buds which is the edible portion.

A blind broccoli follows the same pattern, producing the abundance of leaves without forming the small central head, or the terminal bud clusters, according to the type being grown.

The same has turned up in my garden where two out of six plants of Nine-star Broccoli, planted last fall, have failed to make any terminal bud cluster worth cutting.

This is not a frequent problem, although the cause has been known for a long time; in fact, the cure was reported in a gardening book printed in 1880.

When the first calls came in about three weeks ago I was unable to come up with any logical reason other than root damage when transplanted, or the seedlings being left too long in the small packs and therefore rootbound and hardened.

More recently I recalled what I had read several years ago. The cause is easily corrected, but it must be done in the seedling stage.

All of the plants we group under the name of cabbage produce a long strong tap root and very few side spreading roots; this is sufficent root system for plants growing in the wild. But in the garden we need a much larger spreading root system to obtain the amount of food necessary to produce the large top growth, or the heads of flower buds we use for food.

To obtain this larger root system it is necessary to curtail the length of the large tap root and cause it to branch freely.

This has to be done in the small seedling stage, and some growers feel it is sufficient to pull the seedlings from the seed bed to effect the breaking of the tap root.

Others are not happy with this method, claiming that the damage done to the small amount of side roots when the seedlings are pulled from the soil will set the plants back at a time when they need to establish themselves rapidly to prevent hardened tissues.

These growers make it a standard practice to lift a bunch of seedlings carefully from the seed bed, shake them to get rid of the soil and disentangle the roots, then nip each tap root wits the thumbnail.

Since the commercial grower cannot waste time and labor on plants which eventually go blind, this latter method is considered a good form of insurance.

It is a method that can be easily followed by the home gardener on the dozen or so plants he normally grows for his own use.

The seedlings are lifted and the tap root nipped when quite small, preferably when the two seed leaves are just large enough to handle. They are then set out at two inches apart to grow until large enough for the second transplanting to the garden rows.

Another question often asked by gardeners is whether the amount of leaf surface on transplants should be reduced.

By reducing the amount of leaf surface there is less loss of moisture from the young plants before the roots become re-established, an important factor in non-irrigated fields. It is also thought to lessen the amount of useless leaves on head cabbage and promote faster production of usable heads.

In reducing the leaf surface by one-half, great care must be taken not to damage the central growing tip, and it is doubtful whether it is worth the trouble in the home garden where adequate moisture can usually be applied to both soil and foliage to prevent any severe setback from wilting.

Live-Aboards Get Notice

Sidney council will give private marina owners 60 days to get rid of boat dwellers whose craft don't have proper sewage hookups.

If owners don't comply, council decided Monday, action will be taken against them under the municipal marina operation bylaw.

However Mayor Stan Dear said today council's action was more a delaying action than a firm decision, because he didn't know just what could be done about marina owners who don't comply.

He said he asked council to rescind the bylaw, since it was being violated by some private marinas, but council was not willing to do so.

Council also balked at enforcing the bylaw by prosecuting Alan Dickinson, manager of Van Isle Marina, Dear said.

Dickinson told the Times last week that he had about 10 live-aboards in the marina, and that he considered them an asset.

Dickinson said the boats have no sewage hookup and probably empty their wastes into the water, but he denied they were causing a pollution problem.

Sidney council this spring evicted about 15 people living on boats in Fishermen's Wharf, a federal facility which the municipality administers.

$1M TRIO FLEES

BAIE COMEAU, Que. (CP)

Six prisoners, including three held in connection with a $1.05 million bank robbery last Thursday, escaped Monday night from a provincial jail.

About 40 Quebec Provincial Police QPP officers were searching today for the men in an area surrounding Baie Comeau, 225 miles northeast of Quebec City, a QPP spokesman said.

Guards discovered at 10 p.m. EDT Monday that the men had escaped through the ventilation system and gained access to the roof of the jail, police said. They leaped to the top of the adjoining courthouse and climbed down a ladder.

Police said three of the escapers were arrested Saturday following the robbery Thursday at a branch of the Bank Canadian National at the Manic 3 hydroelectric site, 50 miles north of Baie Comeau.

The three robbery suspects were scheduled to appear for arraignment in court Wednesday. The other escapers were also being held pending court appearances.

Tracking dogs led to the discovery of the $1.05 million in dense woods about 15 miles from the bank the day after the armed holdup.

About 50 QPP officers used tracking dogs and helicpters in a widespread search that led to Saturday's arrest of the three suspects in a wooded area about 20 miles from Manic 3.

Two bank officials were taken hostage during the holdup, which police believe was the biggest in Quebec history, but they were released unharmed a short distance from Baie Comeau.

There is no charge for the meeting.

$300,000 Moving Bill For Crane

Apex Industrial Movers Ltd. of Burnaby had the contract to move the huge crane from Pier 1 to the new Rodney Terminal, a distance of about three-quarters of a mile.

The company used special equipment brought in by rail from Vancouver to move the one million-pound steel crane at a speed of 85 inches a minutes.

Roy Swanson, a director with Brunterm Ltd., a Canadian Pacific subsidiary, said the move cost about $300,000. It was part of the over-all development plans for the Port of Saint John.

Hometown Statue Of Diefenbaker

PRINCE ALBERT (CP)— This city climaxed Diefenbaker Day Monday night when about 2,000 well-wishers watched local politicians, civic officials and friends pay tribute to the former prime minister and long-time Prince Albert MP.

During an evening full of personal tributes, presentations and entertainment, the large audience rose on several occasions to give John Diefenbaker and his wife, Olive, ovations.

At the end of the 2½-hour program, Diefenbaker expressed his thanks and said he was "so deeply moved as to be unable to express" his emotions.

"I owe you all so much," he said. "You the audience) have made it very clear what it means to have spent so many years of my life in public service."

During the program it was announced by Orville Erickson, former president of the Canadian Wildlife Federation, that a statue of Diefenbaker will be commissioned and located in the city.

Both men will compete in the 1975 Canadian championship in Ontario and the 1976 championship at Quebec, both at sites to be determined.

Sleeping Boy Killed

LESTOCK Sask. (CP) — Joseph Hunter, 15, of Lestock, was killed when run over by a CNR freight train near his home in this community about 130 miles southeast of Saskatoon.

The train's engineer said the boy was sleeping between the tracks and the train could not stop in time.

There will be no inquest.

Damage: $250,000

REGINA (CP) — The general manager of Saskatchewan Government Insurance Office, John Green, said Monday that damage to private dwellings in last week's hailstorm is estimated at $250,000.

He said 400 claims totalling that amount have been received, with damage being caused largely by water.

Runoff and sewer backups soaked hundreds of basements in the city Friday as an intense, 20-minute rain-and-hail storm dumped six inches of hail and an inch of rain on the city.

Seek Gov't Insurance

EDMONTON (CP) — The executive council of the Alberta Federation of Labor has voted to initiate a province-wide campaign in support of government-operated, no-fault automobile insurance.

The federation said in a news release Monday it objects to the current practice of private agencies refusing to sell motor vehicle insurance to consumers unless they carry their other insurance policies with the same agency.

It said government-operated, no-fault insurance would avoid costly and time-consuming service duplications, benefiting drivers with lower rates and more efficient claim processing.

New Calgary Park

CALGARY (CP) — Dedication ceremonies for Alberta's first urban provincial park, three times the size of Vancouver's Stanley Park, will be held here Sunday, it was announced Monday.

Fish Creek provincial park covers 1,000 acres of valley land in Southeast Calrgary. Plans include expansion to three thousand acres.

Construction of the multi-million dollar project is planned in phases stretched over a number of years, the first stage — picnic and parking areas — to begin next spring.

30 Months For Robbery

Daniel Hugh McIsaac was sentenced in county court Monday to 30 months in the penitentiary for robbery.

He was found guilty by a jury May 28 of robbing Maurice Detour of a wallet and contents in Saanich April 13.

The original charge alleged the robbery occurred while he was armed with an imitation of an offensive weapon, a starting pistol, but this was amended to robbery just before summations in the trial.

Hail, Farewell At Ogden Docks

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

It was hail and farewell aboard the Prudential Cruises' Santa Magdalena at Ogden Point docks Monday.

She and three sister ships are the only passenger-vessels that run out of Vancouver all year round, leaving there on a 64-day voyage every 16 days, doing the South America circuit.

Built in the early 1960s, the four ships were originally designed for the banana trade and the transporting of American dependents between the U.S. and the Panama Canal zone.

When the banana trade went sour and depedents were flown, rather than transported by sea, new business had to be found to keep paying dividends to the company's shareholders.

The answer was to take on passengers. The Santa Magdalena and her sister ships can carry 100 each and, carrying passengers, they get priority for berthing. This cuts down days spent waiting to come alongside, reducing the round trip to 64 days and keeping freight customers happy.

Roger Wilson, district sales manager and a 26-year P and O Line veteran, says this kind of dual service is unique to the Prudential Line and he has an eye on getting a bigger piece of the Canadian pie. In particular, he's hoping many retired Victorians will be using the Santa Magdalena and her sister ships.

Wilson said his company is linking up with CP Air and Criterion Tsavel of Canada in an effort to make the cruises more attractive to Canadians.

Apart from the passenger market Wilson and his company hope to tap in Victoria, Wilson also considers the Ogden Point docks a far better terminal than the CPR's pier C in Vancouver.

"That has to be the grottiest place I've ever seen," he said. "They charge us a $1 a head for passengers every time we dock. I don't know for what. They don't do any upgrading."

WINDS DELAY A-BLAST

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. (UPI) — Underground detonation of a megaton-class nuclear bomb was postponed today for 24 hours because of high 30-mile-an-hour desert winds.

The explosion, code named "Camembert," was to be the third nuclear test in less than two months and the second in a week.

Federal officials said the postponement was a precautionary measure in case of radiation vents whereby radioactive particles escape into the atmosphere.

Officials warned that the blast, scheduled to be set off at 6 a.m. PDT, could rock high rise buildings in Las Vegas, 120 miles to the south.

The nuclear explosive was buried 4,000 feet under the desert, deeper than the two preceeding tests, indicating it was an even more powerful bomb than the device detonated last week, the most powerful blast in two years. The explosion of a megaton class bomb 3,000 feet underground last Thursday rocked tall buildings in Las Vegas and registered on seismographs at Cal Tech in Pasadena, Calif., as equal to an earthquake of 5.6 on the Richter Scale.

A yield of a megaton equals the explosion of a million tons of TNT, or 50 of the early type atomic bombs that devastated Hiroshima and Nagasaki in the Second World War.

The energy research and development administration, which took over the duties of the defunct Atomic Energy Commission, has confirmed that the sudden rash of megaton-class blasts was sparked by the likelihood they will be forbidden after next March 31.

Congress is now considering ratification of treaty with Russia, already signed by former president Nixon and Soviet leaders, banning tests of bombs more potent than 150 kilotons. A similar treaty has banned all but underground tests for the past 13 years.

Documents Stifled, CIA Prober Says

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sen. Frank Church (D-Idaho) accused the White House Monday of failing to produce key documents for a Senate committee investigation of alleged CIA assassination plots against foreign leaders from the late 1950s to the mid 1960.

"We have not yet received from the White House materials that we have requested that have been promised to the committee," said Church, after a two-hour closed meeting of the Senate CIA investigation which he heads.

He identified the materials as "actual minutes of the National Security Council and of the special group that had control" of covert CIA operations at that time.

Without the documents, Church said, his committee could not proceed with its investigation or questioning of witnesses. Roderick Hills, counsel to the President, called Church's comments "unfortunate" and "unexpected."

Declaring that "nobody has complained to me," Hills said that "we are producing materials as fast as we can . . . we were complimented by senators who came to the White House over the weekend to read materials.

Before Church's criticism, White House press secretary Ron Nessen announced that all of the raw materials on CIA involvement in alleged assassination collected by the Rockefeller Commission had been made available to the Church group.

The committee, focussing on the question of whether the CIA was involved in assassination plans against leaders like Cuba's Fidel Castro, is trying to determine whether any of the presidents holding office during the period in question — Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy or Lyndon B. Johnson — had given actual orders for plans to be drawn up or executed.

It had scheduled a week of hearings with key figures in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations who might have been part of such a chain of command or have had knowledge of it — former national security adviser McGeorge Bundy, whose appearance Monday was cancelled; former national security adviser Walt Whitman Rostow; the former chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, Maxwell Taylor; Secretary of State Dean Rusk; and former secretary of defence Robert McNamara.

Church said that until the documents are forthcoming, all of the appearances of these witnesses may have to be postponed. The committee will proceed today, however, with closed-door questioning of alleged mob figure John Roselli and on Wednesday with questioning of former FBI agent Robert Maheu.

Church said he wasn't accusing the President himself of deliberately withholding the documents but, while the committee has received considerable materials, White House aides had been holding back some of the most crucial NSC minutes. The aides the committee is dealing with are Rod Hills, an assistant to White House counsel Philip Buchen, and Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, deputy assistant to the President for national security affairs.

"They tell us they're reviewing it," said Church. "I don't charge at this time bad faith because I don't believe the President . . . can be countermanded by subordinates." He said, "If necessary, Sen. Tower and I will ask for another appointment with the President." Sen. John Tower (R—Tex.) is the committee's senior republican.

No Blame in Death

NANAIMO (CP)—A coroner's jury ruled Monday that the death of a diver in a decompression chamber March 18 was accidental and attached no blame.

The jury said he died as a result of an explosion, fire and carbon monoxide poisoning.

The jury also said that Can Dive Services Ltd. of North Vancouver, the diver's employer, was negligent in regard to procedure but said the company did not contribute to McDonald's death.

Rose, Orchid Quality High

The quality of the summer roses and orchids entered in the Victoria Horticultural Society's summer show last week were excellent, according to club president Ken Barnes.

But entries were down slightly because many flowers are late in blooming due to the cool spring, he said.

Mrs. Anne Rendle, 1853 Fern Street, won the Nayssmith challenge cup for the highest aggregate of the show. She also took the Layritz challenge trophy in the one stem floribunda class.

Other winners are as follows: Mrs. Florence Eley, R. A. Nicholson bowl, best bloom in rose section, Beaven rose trophy, best three H.T. roses; Eric Billington, Dr. Gavin Chisholm challenge bowl, highest aggregate in the rose section, C. J. BEER ENDORSED ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The American Medical Association convention was told that beer is a universally safe substitute for water and other liquids that can cause the travellers' malady, diarrhea.

"In my experience involving some 60 countries, there is no bad beer produced anywhere in the world. The field is too competitive," said Dr. B. H. Kean of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Centre.

"Beer is one of the best things to prevent dehydration because you get salt, too," said Dr. Martin Wolfe, the U.S. state department's specialist in tropical medicine.

"Drink it out of the bottle, don't pour it in a glass which might be dirty," added Col. James Burke of the Walter Reed Medical Centre. "Beer does another good thing. It keeps your kidneys open."

The experts said well-boiled tea and water bottled and carbonated soda water are also safe in most countries, but gave their warmest endorsement to beer.

New Role for Men Sought

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Men need liberation as much as women, says Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme.

"A changed role for women requires a changed role for men," Palme told the United Nations' International Woman's Year conference Monday.

"Men have assumed the responsib9lity for providing the family's support," Palme said. "They have had occupations which often entail great health risks and physical strain. They have had much too little time for contact with their children.

"Thus we also speak of the liberation of men (in Sweden)," he said.

He said adequate child care was essential for achieving the "emancipation of women and liberation of men, and to allow more room for the needs of children."

Palme also said industrialized nations must support "the development efforts of the poor countries themselves, and development toward equality and justice in the world.

"This must not prevent us from working in our own countries for social progress and concentrated efforts to ensure men and women equal rights," he added.

—Margo St. James, head of Coyote, a San Francisco-based prostitutes' organization, was reported enroute to Mexico City to demand the assembly adopt a resolution giving women the "right" to engage in prostitution.

The United Nations has said it wants to wipe out prostitution worldwide.

—U.S. Sen Charles Percy (R—Ill.) told a news conference "reproductive freedom," or womens' control over their own bodies, was "a matter of very high priority."

But he said the U.S. delegation would not attempt to have the issue, or the question of abortion, added to the conference agenda.

Record $60M Ransom

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Two Argentine businessmen were free Monday after their multi-national company paid $60 million—believed to be a world record ransom—to the left-wing Montoneros guerrillas who kidnapped them nine months ago.

Juan Born, 40, and Jorge Born, 41, were seized on Sept. 19 in a Buenos Aires suburb. They are the sons of the founder and chairman of Bunge et Born, the world's third-biggest grains dealer.

During the kidnapping their chauffeur and a company executive were killed.

Well-informed news media sources said the ransom was announced Friday at a clandestine news conference by Mario Firmenich, leader of the Montoneros and one of the country's most-wanted men.

The sources said Jorge Born was released Friday but Juan Born was freed some time ago after the company met demands by the Montoneros, distributed food and clothing worth more than $1 million to the poor in several Argentine cities, and placed advertisements in local and foreign newspapers.

The foreign advertisements accused the company of exploiting the Argentine people and giving financial support to the 1955 coup that overthrew the late Gen. Juan Peron.

The Montoneros went underground last September to fight the government of Gen. Peron's widow, Maria Estela, after previously battling to secure his return to power.

Sirica Upholds Liddy Sentence

WASHINGTON (WP) — Judge John J. Sirica has refused to reduce the 20-year prison sentence he imposed former White House aide G. Gordon Liddy, saying the convicted Watergate burglar has shown no "remorse or regret ... contrition or sorrow" for his role in the break-in.

Other convicted Watergate defendants who have cooperated with various investigations have received lighter prison sentences from Judge Sirica and have even had those sentences reduced by the judge.

The ruling means Liddy, 44, who has already spent 25 months in jail on his Watergate sentences, must be behind bars for at least another six years before he is eligible for parole. He has already spent more time in prison than any other Watergate criminal, and is serving the longest sentence meted out in the scandal.

Sirica also refused to set aside a $40,000 fine he imposed on Liddy, saying the defendant could take a "pauper's oath" and serve an additional 30 days in prison instead of pay the fine if he does not have the money to pay when he finishes his jail term.

There is no normal route for Liddy to appeal further the length of his sentence, according to several lawyers.

Sirica specifically linked his refusal to reduce the sentence to Liddy's steadfast refusal to testify about his Watergate role.

Eighteen of the 25 months that Liddy has already spent in jail were to satisfy a contempt sentence handed out by Sirica because Liddy refused to testify before a grand jury after being granted immunity.

Barrett Signs Refinery Deal

LONDON (CP) — The British Columbia government signed an agreement today with Sim-Chem Ltd., making the British-based firm the prime contractor for the province's planned $350 million oil refinery.

Premier David Barrett also announced that he has been assured by Prime Minister Harold Wilson that the British government will make loans available at attractive interest rates to give British firms "the inside track" on supplying material and technology for the refinery.

But British firms still would have to offer competitive prices and assured delivery dates to beat companies from other countries in the tenders.

Value of the Sim-Chem contract is not yet known. But James Rhodes, chairman of the province-owned British Columbia Petroleum Corp., said it would be worth more than $10 million.

Signing of the contract itself must await selection of a site for the refinery and commitments of crude oil supplies from the Alberta government, Barrett said.

A letter of intent with Sim-Chem was signed today by Rhodes and provincial Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

The signing capped a week of talks Barrett and his officials have held with British government officials and ministers, and with British and U.S. bankers.

Barrett offered few details of the proposed financing of the refinery but said he had "very good discussions with the London banking houses."

Clinton, Merritt and Surrey were the prime site locations proposed for the refinery, which would be the province's biggest.

"We hope to be completed by 1980 — perhaps sooner," the premier said.

Sim-Chem at present is engaged in construction of a $450 million North Sea petroleum and natural gas processing installation at Teeside, in northeastern England.

Barrett said during the last 10 years the firm and its associated companies have been responsible for more than $2 billion worth of process engineering projects throughout the world.

Gandhi Allowed To Continue

NEW DELHI (AP) — A Supreme Court justice ruled today that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi can continue to head the Indian government until the full court decides her appeal of a conviction for illegal practices in her 1971 campaign for Parliament.

But the 57-year-old Mrs. Gandhi suffered a significant political setback when Justice V. R. Krishna Iyer barred her from voting in Parliament. He ruled that she could only participate in parliamentary debate as head of the government.

The ruling means that the prime minister, who along with her cabinet colleagues must belong to parliament, will not be a full-fledged member of the federal legislature.

It marked the first time in 28 years of independence that any restrictions have been imposed on an Indian prime minister and is expected to spur opposition demands for her resignation during the processing of her appeal, which is expected to take at least two months.

'CYNICISM' ... 'TREACHERY'

All Sides Flail Turner Budget

OPERATION BEARLIFT touches down at Prince George airport where passenger agent Shirley MacNeal cuddles one of three orphaned black bear cubs on their way to the Vancouver Game Farm at Aldergrove. Mother of twin cubs inside cage was chased by dogs from a trailer court at McBride while mother of third was shot by a farmer in the same area of northern B.C.

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal budget brought down by Finance Minister John Turner which featured an immediate 10-cent a gallon gasoline price increase drew criticism from Opposition, business and labor leaders today.

Opposition spokesmen lambasted the deficit budget as "cynical" and "treacherous."

Don Montgomery, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress said the budget — especially the gas hike — is aimed directly at the working man and doesn't "come to grips with either inflation or rising unemployment."

John Poyen, president of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said exploration funds contained in the budget were "only a drop in the bucket."

The gasoline tax provided the highlights of Turner's budget which made only a few changes from his November budget, and no change from the fiscal stance taken seven months ago.

There was confusion today about when consumers should start paying the new tax on gasoline, and a finance department spokesman concluded it should be a day or two before the prices rise at most pumps.

told a news conference the tax midnight Monday on gasoline sold by a manufacturer, importer or producer, according to the budget.

With the frequency of deliveries to retailers, Turner told a news conference the tax would be effective today at the pumps.

The finance department spokesman said today, however, that the retailer has not paid the new excise tax on gasoline already in his storage tank and should not raise the prices until he receives a new shipment that will include the tax.

The finance department estimated that based on existing stocks in the country, the tax-induced price increase should not reach the pumps for seven or eight days. The spokesman said however that some retailers will have to raise the prices immediately they receive new shipments.

With certain new tax revenues and some reductions in spending it is expected the new budget will produce a cash requirement of some $5.3 billion — almost exactly the current figure estimated on the November budget.

He also announced changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act to deal with "undesirable efforts on work incentives and recent changes in structure of th elabor market."

He also announced a change in the formula for financing unemployment insurance whereby the federal government will base cover the costs of all payments — up to the average unemployment rate of the previous eight years.

Until now the government has covered costs of four per cent unemployment. It is estimated the new formula would have the federal government, this year, covering the cost of 5.3 per cent unemployment.

Turner also announced steps to curtail rapidly escalating expenditures for hospitalization and medicare.

He served formal notice that the federal government will amend its cost-sharing arrangement for hospital care, and he announced ceilings on future payments under the Medical Care Act.

The ceiling will be for a 13 per cent increase in 1976-77, 10.5 per cent in 177-78, and 8.5 per cent in 1978-79 and subsequent years.

There were a minimum of changes in personal income taxes.

However, the minister announced that the eight per cent tax credit maximum of $800 will be reduced to $500. It will affect taxpayers earning more than $27,000. A married taxpayer with two children under 16 and a salary of $35,000 would pay $228 more.

There will be an increase in the air transport tax to eight per cent from the present five per cent on Canada-U.S.

'Fuddle, Fuddle, Fuddle'

LONDON (CP) — The premier of British Columbia has called Finance Minister John Turner's budget "retrogressive, inflationary and just plain stupid."

David Barrett, in London to discuss British involvement in his government's planned oil refinery, told reporters today that Turner's budget Monday amounted to "an outrageous assault on basic health-care services."

He said the budget spending limits impose a greater burden on the wealthy provinces, which must provide for their own people as well as help pay for health costs in poorer provinces.

Barrett also criticized increased gasoline prices on grounds that most of the increase would flow to profit-rich foreign-owned oil companies.

"It's fuddle, fuddle, fuddle," he said.

Turner had labored for months preparing his budget, and "it's not even worthy of being called a mouse."

'All-Out Bloody War'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forest industry labor negotiations in British Columbia were at a standstill today as the third major union launched a strike vote among its members.

The Pulp Paper and Woodworkers of Canada announced they are conducting the vote among 5,500 B.C. members and Reg Ginn, their national president, warned the industry is headed into "an all-out bloody war" this summer.

Ginn said a meeting of a liaison committee of the PPWC, Canadian Paperworkers' Union and International Woodworkers' Union and International Woodworkers of America re-affirmed a tough stand against the industry's offer of only cost-of-living wage adjustments this year.

The IWA negotiators met mediator Fred Geddes but there still was no indication if or when mediation will resume with the employers present.

No discussions at all were taking place with mediator Ken Albertini involving the pulp unions and many of the same forest companies.

Ginn said the PPWC will join the other two unions by taking strike votes starting today and finishing early in July.

The vote currently being conducted among 7,200 CPU members is scheduled for completion July 1 while the 29,000-strong coast IWA will have its counting finished Friday. The IWA contract expired at midnight June 14.

The industry-wide strike could start July 1.

Israel Softens Conditions

Associated Press

Israel has agreed to soften some of its key conditions for a new Sinai agreement with Egypt following Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's talks with President Ford in Washington, diplomatic sources said today.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was reported in an "extremely important meeting in Alexandria with his inner cabinet.

Sources in Jerusalem said Israel now would agree to withdraw from the western slopes of the strategic Mitla and Gidi passes in the Sinai while still retaining the eastern rises as a defence buffer against Egypt.

Israel would return the Abu Rudeis oil fields in southern Sinai and would give Egypt a land corridor to the fields rather than make them an isolated Egyptian enclave reachable only from the sea, as proposed in March, the sources said.

UN Mission Bombed

An anonymous telephone caller, saying he was from the Young Croatian Army, later claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Fifth Avenue building across from Central Park.

Nearly all the windows of the mission and two nearby apartment houses were blown out by the explosion but no injuries were reported. Ten mission employees were asleep inside the three-storey building at the time.

Yugoslav diplomats protested in New York and Washington against what they called inadequate police protection from "a chain of terrorist attacks" against their activities in the United States.

The bomb was described as a "high yield explosive" that was "apparently put together by someone who knew what they were doing."

UIC Premiums Will Be Hiked

OTTAWA — Employees and employers will be asked to pay a larger share of unemployment insurance costs beginning in 1976, Finance Minister John Turner said in Monday's budget.

The change will mean increased premiums, to be announced at a later date.

Turner said the cost of unemployment benefits for the year begun last April 1 is expected to exceed $3.75 billion, up from the $2.3 billion last year.

Employee-employer contributions are expected to provide $2 billion but the remainder would have to come from the general taxpayer.

The measure was one of several changes to the unemployment insurance system announced in the budget which together could save nearly $100 million.

Government officials refused to disclose by how much premiums will go up as a result of the changes until legislation is presented to Parliament. Turner said the legislation will be introduced "shortly."

Other amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act will:

—Double from three to six weeks the maximum period of disqualification from benefits for people who quit their jobs without cause or who refuse suitable employment, as a means to increase incentive to work;

—Terminate payments of premiums and receipt of benefits for people 65 or over;

—Reduce the special benefit rate for low-income claimants from 75 per cent of insurable earnings to the standard rate of 66 2-3 per cent for single persons;

—Extend the period of benefits for those suffering temporary disability or on special training courses;

—Allow receipt of the maximum 15 weeks of sickness benefits at any time in the first 25 weeks on claim instead of the first 15 weeks as provided at present.

Ottawa Paring Medicare Funds

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government served notice on the provinces Monday that it will drastically limit its share of payments to meet increased medicare costs beginning next year and will terminate its existing hospital insurance agreements in five years.

Hospital and medical care payments cost the federal government $6 billion this year, up nearly 20 per cent from last year.

The announcement by Finance Minister John Turner in his budget follows numerous warnings about increasing costs for the programs shared by federal and provincial governments.

Turner said the government will limit the increase in its net contributions to provincial medical aid programs to 13 per cent next year, 10.5 per cent in 1977-78 and 8.5 per cent thereafter.

While Ottawa and the provinces have been talking for several years about changing hospital insurance arrangements, the government's announcement of ceilings on increased medicare contributions to the provinces was not expected.

The federal government appeared to be telling the provinces that if they can't keep medicare costs down, they will have to foot more and more of the bill for the rising costs.

Turner said both programs, under which the federal government pays up to 50 per cent of provincial health and hospital costs meeting set minimum requirements, have long since met their basic objective of providing comprehensive health care.

Turner said the net ceiling next year of 13 per cent in growth of federal medical-aid contributions likely will reach 14.5 per cent when natural population increase is taken into account.

With an added population growth factor of 1.5 per cent, the gross ceilings would be reduced to a 12-per-cent increase in two years and 10 per cent by 1978, he said.

TOWN TALK

Orange-lacketed young men are now doing their stuff with survey instruments on the Trans-Canada Highway between the Thetis Lake overpass and Tillicum, in readiness for the widening to four lanes which may start late this year.

They're a symbol of hope to those wheeled wretches who have to endure the daily crawl in the "rush hour" — pardon our hysterical mirth — on this clogged artery.

From the Thetis Lake intersection itself, where the two main streams of traffic converge, it's an everyday occurrence for vehicles to back up hundreds of yards.

But drivers from the Sooke, Colwood and Metchosin areas who thought they'd seen everything in the way of highway frustration found last Friday they hadn't.

Their creeping line stretched all the way back to Colwood's Centennial Pool, more than a mile from and nowhere in sight of the Trans-Canada.

Is it any wonder that commuters on the provincial government's new rural bus system serving the western communities complain they are arriving late for work?

Perhaps the Hon. James Lorimer (transit) will persuade the Hon. Graham Lea (highways) to do the hon. thing by the 5 m.p.h. crowd — hurry up with that widening job.

Claremont high school grads have been scrubbing up their image after four-letter words appeared on some Saanich buildings recently.

Although the words "Claremont Grads '75" were painted along with profanity, Claremont students may not have been culprits, school spokesmen told Prospect Lake Community Association head Pat Harkness.

The writing on the wall which also appeared on Lakeside Store, Prospect Lake General Store and Lakeside Park change rooms didn't amuse Saanich police.

"It's not just a prank. It's a criminal offence," said Sgt. Ken Gale.

CALLAN

Ed Callan, former business agent and international representative of the International Union of Operating Engineers, has been accorded a lifetime membership, capping 27 years of service to Victoria-based Local 918.

He joined the local in 1948 when it had only 14 members, served on its executive, became a staff member, and from 1957 to his retirement last September was international representative for B.C. and Alberta.

Aside from the prestige — what are the benefits, he was asked.

"It means I won't have to pay any more union dues," Ed replied.

Oyez, oh no ... it's another proclamation of yet another special "week." This time, from Mayor Peter Pollen at City Hall, we learn that it's "Hire a Student Week."

All citizens are urged to "co-operate fully with the Canada Manpower Centre for Students which is charged with the responsibility for this most imprtant work."

So come on, everybody, let's hire a student. You don't need one, you say? Well how about hiring one and asking him or her to do an in-depth feasibility study on hiring students?

The question put to the Grade 5 class at Vic West Elementary was: Now that corporal punishment (strapping) has been banned how do you feel teachers should deal with discipline problems?

"Students should be punished for smoking, they should be strapped for lieing;" Tom.

"If they are bad give them another chance, if they are still bad give them a detention;" Patrick.

"Call the parents and tell the parents that when the child is smartened up, you may bring him back," Debra.

"Talk to the person nicely and tell them what they should have done;" Cheryl.

He lost his wallet on the Shawnigan-Port Renfrew Road and the first thing he thought was "what about all those credit cards?"

So, early Monday he notified all companies (about 15 and most of them have head offices in the east). No sooner was he off the phone when the RCMP called and said a motorist saw the wallet at the side of the road and turned it in — credit cards and all.

So back to the phone (long distance) and tell the head offices to cancel the cancellation of the cards.

He should have had faith in his fellow man.

Young said the fishermen tied up in Bamfield used the day to paint the Bamfield community hall and to help the municipality top the trees.

Elizabeth Watling, 72, recent winner of the Canadian Council of the Blind's 1976 Woman of the Year award, has two bits of advice for the sighted.

"If you're serving tea, don't ask somebody else whether the blind person takes cream and sugar," she said. That's just one of the ways well-meaning but ignorant people embarrass her, she said.

People often forget their blind companions in conversation can't see when they move off, said Mrs. Watling.

President of Victoria's White Cane Club since its inception in 1929, she now lives alone in a Humboldt St. apartment and spends most of her energy helping the more han 400 blind persons in the city.

The award she will receive next year is her second — she was given a medal in 1973 from the native Sons of B.C. for her extensive social work.

And then there was the prominent local type who last week took the late ferry to Vancouver, pulled his Volkswagen camper into the Airport Inn parking lot for the night, awoke early, dressed, shaved, cooked breakfast and drove downtown for an early a.m. business meeting.

A familiar face is gone from the wickets of Postal Station "A" in Saanich after Eleanor Casler — an 11-year-old Victoria Post Office employee — packed up to take over duties as postmistress in San Josef, B.C.

Casler was appointed to the position to oversee all postal administration in the town on northern Vancouver Island.

Stamp collectors know her for her many years' work in the main post office's philatelic section, and as a cashier in the Government Street office.

Tennis Courts Okayed

A last-ditch attempt by Ald. Doug McLelland to stop a joint Oak Bay-Greater Victoria school board proposal for tennis courts at Oak Bay junior high school near the Oak Bay Recreation Centre was defeated by council Monday night.

Mayor Brian Smith was authorized by council to go ahead with an agreement with the school board for the proposal, which will also include tennis courts at Willows elementary school.

The proposal involves eight courts, four of them indoor in an inflatable vinyl bubble behind Oak Bay junior high plus parking for 44 cars.

Oak Bay has budgeted $357,000 but this includes a grant of $101,000 from the provincial government. The school board will provide the land and pay for the salaries of any personnel involved during the time it uses the courts.

McLelland said residents will "think we have lost our marbles, our fiscal credibility will be zero" to enter yet another major capital investment.

'Lies' in Tenant Circular Barred by Rental Agency

A rental agency spokesman claimed today that circulars being distributed by the Capital Region Tenants Association contain "out and out lies."

This is the main reason, he said, he refused permission to have them circulated in apartments run by his company.

Gordon Brown of Brown Bros. Agencies Ltd. at 1125 Blanshard was approached Monday by CRTA president Mrs. Ann Tarasoff. She and other members of her group had been refused permission by managers of apartments run by Brown's company to canvass the tenants on Sunday.

The circulars, prepared by the B.C. Tenants Association of Vancouver with the assistance of a $10,000 grant from the Rent Review Commission, urge tenants to attend a BCTA public hearing, at the Centennial Square senior citizens centre Wednesday from 2 to 5 p.m.

Brown said he was not concerned about the public hearing, but about two particular statements made in the pamphlet.

One reads:

Brown said this might be true of some of the highrises in Vancouver and, perhaps, of apartments in Chilliwack, Kelowna and other mainland areas but unjustified here.

"It's an out and out lie," Brown said. "It's just not true. One building we manage is owned by a Chinese that works 24 hours a day in a grocery store. Another is owned by a Chinese who works 24 hours a day in a butcher shop."

Brown also took exception to a statement in the pamphlet that rents are eating up as much as 60 per cent of some tenants' incomes and were rising higher than operating costs.

SECOND SECTION

17% Pay Hike Likely For Senior City Staff

Senior, non-union staff at Victoria City Hall will probably receive a 17 per cent across-the-board salary increase this year.

Mayor Peter Pollen said this morning a recommendation to that effect would be placed before city council's regular caucus meeting for endorsement later today.

The increase, retroactive to April 1, would parallel the immediate 17 per cent boost which most of the city's inside workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, received in their recent contract settlement.

But the CUPE employees also receive a further three per cent step up Oct. 1, and Pollen declined to say whether council will consider a similar fall increase for the city's 35-union exempt personnel.

If council decided against such a move, the senior staff would fall further behind their union colleagues in terms of salary increases. In recent years they have trailed by only about one-half to one per cent.

When asked this morning on what basis the 17 per cent proposal was worked out, Pollen joked: "We argued for eight hours (at a meeting with personnel director Terry Fitzpatrick and Colin Crisp, assistant to the city manager, on Monday) and ended up flipping a coin."

But he added that the figure was considered "reasonable" in light of the already-agreed union increases. The package to be recommended for adoption today would include "a couple of minor anomaly adjustments," he added.

Pollen also said that once the increase takes effect, city manager Jim Bramley will be asked to review the senior staff salaries "with a view to making sure that these are in line with senior management positions in other levels of government and in industry."

Management staff who continued to toil during the Oak Bay lockout of employees for three months earlier this year were rewarded by council Monday night.

They will get an average payment of about $1,200 each plus an extra week of holiday.

The precise amounts paid to each individual non-union person will not be disclosed, Mayor Brian Smith said today.

Different amounts will be paid depending on the individual hours put in and the different strains involved, he said.

It will not "in any way" compensate them on an overtime basis but "does recognize they did have not only long hours but extra strains and pressures."

Development Freeze Looms in C. Saanich

Central Saanich council will vote in two weeks on a motion to freeze all land development which requires zoning changes until after a community plan has been prepared.

Notice of the motion was served Monday night by Ald. David Hill at a meeting of council's scbdivision and zoning committee. Aldermen will vote on it at their next council meeting, July 7.

Hill's resolution calls for council to declare a moratorium on any further land-use contract zoning amendments or any other change of permitted land use until the community has a community plan.

All areas of the Capital district are preparing community plans to complement the official regional plan passed last year.

Consultants hired by C entral Saanich are expected to bring a draft community plan before council in September, Mayor Jean Butler said today.

BUTLER

She said she will support the resolution because for council to approve zone changes at this point constitutes piecemeal planning.

If council approves the resolution, it would stall among other projects a proposal to develop 850 to 900 homes on 200 acres east of Tod Inlet.

BAMC Development Corp, subsidiary of a Winnipeg firm, Genstar, has held informal discussions with council

Wheeet! Warble! Signal for Blind

And if Erol Hembroff has his way, 80 Victoria intersections will soon be warbling and whistling at passersby in a program planned to prevent death or injury to the city's blind.

★ ★ ★

Installed in 1973, the whistle has received a lot of favorable comment from the blind, said CNIB administrator Isobel Beveridge.

Hembroff, a B.C. government computer programmer, wants to cut down the danger he and other sightless walkers constantly face.

"I find we are playing a bit of Russian roulette every time we cross the street," he said.

The current proposal for audible signals — "wobbly" whistles at east-west crossings and steady whistles at north-south ones — was worked out by Hembroff and city traffic technician Andy Jansen.

The automatic system would cost $4,000 for 80 separate corners.

"It's a small sum of money and it's economically and humanely justified," said Hembroff who has offered to pay for 10 per cent of the bill and seek sponsors to bring that to 50 per cent.

The city would then only have to put up $2,000.

He's put a time limit of January, 1977, on his $400 offer.

"It only takes three seconds to get killed and it shouldn't take more than 18 months to try to prevent it."

The project could go hand-in-hand with the curb ramping for the blind which is costing Victoria $15,000, he said.

Barrett Signs Refinery Deal

LONDON (CP) — The British Columbia government signed an agreement today with Sim-Chem Ltd., making the British-based firm the prime contractor for the province's planned $350 million oil refinery.

Premier David Barrett also announced that he has been assured by Prime Minister Harold Wilson that the British government will make loans available at attractive interest rates to give British firms "the inside track" on supplying material and technology for the refinery.

But British firms still would have to offer competitive prices and assured delivery dates to beat companies from other countries in the tenders.

Value of the Sim-Chem contract is not yet known. But James Rhodes, chairman of the province-owned British Columbia Petroleum Corp., said it would be worth more than $10 million.

Signing of the contract itself must await selection of a site for the refinery and commitments of crude oil supplies from the Alberta government, Barrett said.

A letter of intent with Sim-Chem was signed today by Rhodes and provincial Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

The signing capped a week of talks Barrett and his officials have held with British government officials and ministers, and with British and U.S. bankers.

Barrett offered few details of the proposed financing of the refinery but said he had "very good discussions with the London banking houses."

Clinton, Merritt and Surrey were the prime site locations proposed for the refinery, which would be the province's biggest.

"We hope to be completed by 1980 — perhaps sooner," the premier said.

Sim-Chem at present is engaged in construction of a $450 million North Sea petroleum and natural gas processing installation at Teeside, in northeastern England.

Barrett said during the last 10 years the firm and its associated companies have been responsible for more than $2 billion worth of process engineering projects throughout the world.

Gandhi Allowed To Continue

NEW DELHI (AP) — A Supreme Court justice ruled today that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi can continue to head the Indian government until the full court decides her appeal of a conviction for illegal practices in her 1971 campaign for Parliament.

But the 57-year-old Mrs. Gandhi suffered a significant political setback when Justice V. R. Krishna Iyer barred her from voting in Parliament. He ruled that she could only participate in parliamentary debate as head of the government.

The ruling means that the prime minister, who along with her cabinet colleagues must belong to parliament, will not be a full-fledged member of the federal legislature.

It marked the first time in 28 years of independence that any restrictions have been imposed on an Indian prime minister and is expected to spur opposition demands for her resignation during the processing of her appeal, which is expected to take at least two months.

'All-Out Bloody War'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forest industry labor negotiations in British Columbia were at a standstill today as the third major union launched a strike vote among its members.

The Pulp Paper and Woodworkers of Canada announced they are conducting the vote among 5,500 B.C. members and Reg Ginn, their national president, warned the industry is headed into "an all-out bloody war" this summer.

Ginn said a meeting of a liaison committee of the PPWC, Canadian Paperworkers' Union and International Woodworkers of America re-affirmed a tough stand against the industry's offer of only cost-of-living wage adjustments this year.

The IWA negotiators met mediator Fred Geddes but there still was no indication if or when mediation will resume with the employers present.

No discussions at all were taking place with mediator Ken Albertini involving the pulp unions and many of the same forest companies.

Ginn said the PPWC will join the other two unions by taking strike votes starting today and finishing early in July.

The vote currently being conducted among 7,200 CPU members is scheduled for completion July 1 while the 29,000-strong coast IWA will have its counting finished Friday. The IWA contract expired at midnight June 14.

The industry-wide strike could start July 1.

'CYNICISM' ... 'TREACHERY'

All Sides Flail Turner Budget

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal budget brought down by Finance Minister John Turner which featured an immediate 10-cent a gallon gasoline price increase drew criticism from Opposition, business and labor leaders today.

Opposition spokesmen lambasted the deficit budget as "cynical" and "treacherous."

Don Montgomery, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress said the budget — especially the gas hike — is aimed directly at the working man and doesn't "come to grips with either inflation or rising unemployment."

John Poyen, president of the Canadian Petroleum Association, said exploration funds contained in the budget were "only a drop in the bucket."

The gasoline tax provided the highlights of Turner's budget which made only a few changes from his November budget, and no change from the fiscal stance taken seven months ago.

There was confusion today about when consumers should start paying the new tax on gasoline, and a finance department spokesman concluded it should be a day or two before the prices rise at most pumps.

The tax was effective at midnight Monday on gasoline sold by a manufacturer, importer or producer, according to the budget.

With the frequency of deliveries to retailers, Turner told a news conference the tax would be effective today at the pumps.

The finance department spokesman said today, however, that the retailer has not paid the new excise tax on gasoline already in his storage tank and should not raise the prices until he receives a new shipment that will include the tax.

The finance department estimated that based on existing stocks in the country, the tax-induced price increase should not reach the pumps for seven or eight days. The spokesman said however that some retailers will have to raise the prices immediately they receive new shipments.

With certain new tax revenues and some reductions in spending it is expected the new budget will produce a cash requirement of some $5.3 billion — almost exactly the current figure estimated on the November budget.

Turner also announced changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act to deal with "undesirable efforts on work incentives and recent changes in structure of the labor market."

He also announced a change in the formula for financing unemployment insurance whereby the federal government will base cover the costs of all payments — up to the average unemployment rate of the previous eight years.

Until now the government has covered costs of four per cent unemployment. It is estimated the new formula would have the federal government, this year, covering the cost of 5.3 per cent unemployment.

Turner also announced steps to curtail rapidly escalating expenditures for hospitalization and medicare.

He served formal notice that the federal government will amend its cost-sharing arrangement for hospital care, and he announced ceilings on future payments under the Medical Care Act.

The ceiling will be for a 13 per cent increase in 1976-77, 10.5 per cent in 177-78, and 8.5 per cent in 1978-79 and subsequent years.

There were a minimum of changes in personal income taxes.

However, the minister announced that the eight per cent tax credit maximum of $800 will be reduced to $500. It will affect taxpayers earning more than $27,000. A married taxpayer with two children under 16 and a salary of $35,000 would pay $228 more.

There will be an increase in the air transport tax to eight per cent from the present five per cent on Canada-U.S.

'Fuddle, Fuddle, Fuddle'

LONDON (CP) — The premier of British Columbia has called Finance Minister John Turner's budget "retrogressive, inflationary and just plain stupid."

David Barrett, in London to discuss British involvement in his government's planned oil refinery, told reporters today that Turner's budget Monday amounted to "an outrageous assault on basic health-care services."

He said the budget spending limits impose a greater burden on the wealthy provinces, which must provide for their own people as well as help pay for health costs in poorer provinces.

Barrett also criticized increased gasoline prices on grounds that most of the increase would flow to profit-rich foreign-owned oil companies.

"It's fuddle, fuddle, fuddle," he said.

Turner had labored for months preparing his budget, and "it's not even worthy of being called a mouse."

Israel Softens Conditions

Associated Press

Israel has agreed to soften some of its key conditions for a new Sinai agreement with Egypt following Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's talks with President Ford in Washington, diplomatic sources said today.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was reported in an "extremely important" meeting in Alexandria with his inner cabinet.

Sources in Jerusalem said Israel now would agree to withdraw from the western slopes of the strategic Mitla and Gidi passes in the Sinai while still retaining the eastern rises as a defence buffer against Egypt.

Israel would return the Abu Rudeis oil fields in southern Sinai and would give Egypt a land corridor to the fields rather than make them an isolated Egyptian enclave reachable only from the sea, as proposed in March, the sources said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Plane Crash

NEW YORK (AP) — An Eastern Airlines 727 jet with 115 persons aboard crashed today in the Jamaica Bay area while coming in for a landing at Kennedy International Airport, police said.

"There are bodies all over the street," one police report said.

DUESSELDORF, Germany (UPI)—The West German government today charged Guenter Guillaume with high treason in an alleged spying plot that toppled the government of former chancellor Willy Brandt.

Pen Escapes Drop

OTTAWA (CP)—Tighter security at penitentiaries reduced prison escapes by 66 per cent in 1974 compared with 1972, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said in the Commons Monday.

NDP Gains Seat

REGINA (CP)—The New Democratic Party increased its majority in the Saskatchewan legislature to 17 seats with election Monday night of Don Faris by a five-vote margin over Liberal Ron Thorstad in a delayed count of hospital votes. On election night June 11 they had finished in a tie.

NATIVE FISHERMEN BUY $1M CANNERY

BELLA BELLA (CP) — The Central Native Fishermen's Co-operative, formed here last week has bought the town's cannery for more than $1 million.

Edwin Newman, president of the co-op, said the purchase of the cannery from Millbanke Industries had been financed entirely by its members through normal banking channels.

"The Royal Bank of Canada lent us something more than $1 million, even though the federal government refused to guarantee the loan," he said. "There are no foreign interests in the co-op."

UN Mission Bombed

An anonymous telephone caller, saying he was from the Young Croatian Army, later claimed responsibility for the bombing of the Fifth Avenue building across from Central Park.

Nearly all the windows of the mission and two nearby apartment houses were blown out by the explosion but no injuries were reported. Ten mission employees were asleep inside the three-storey building at the time.

Yugoslav diplomats protested in New York and Washington against what they called inadequate police protection from "a chain of terrorist attacks" against their activities in the United States.

The bomb was described as a "high yield explosive" that was "apparently put together by someone who knew what they were doing."

UIC Premiums Will Be Hiked

OTTAWA — Employees and employers will be asked to pay a larger share of unemployment insurance costs beginning in 1976, Finance Minister John Turner said in Monday's budget.

The change will mean increased premiums, to be announced at a later date.

Turner said the cost of unemployment benefits for the year begun last April 1 is expected to exceed $3.75 billion, up from the $2.3 billion last year.

Employee-employer contributions are expected to provide $2 billion but the remainder would have to come from the general taxpayer.

The measure was one of several changes to the unemployment insurance system announced in the budget which together could save nearly $100 million.

Government officials refused to disclose by how much premiums will go up as a result of the changes until legislation is presented to Parliament. Turner said the legislation will be introduced "shortly."

Other amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act will:

—Double from three to six weeks the maximum period of disqualification from benefits for people who quit their jobs without cause or who refuse suitable employment, as a means to increase incentive to work;

—Terminate payments of premiums and receipt of benefits for people 65 or over;

—Reduce the special benefit rate for low-income claimants from 75 per cent of insurable earnings to the standard rate of 66 2-3 per cent for single persons;

—Extend the period of benefits for those suffering temporary disability or on special training courses;

—Allow receipt of the maximum 15 weeks of sickness benefits at any time in the first 25 weeks on claim instead of the first 15 weeks as provided at present.

Ottawa Paring Medicare Funds

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government served notice on the provinces Monday that it will drastically limit its share of payments to meet increased medicare costs beginning next year and will terminate its existing hospital insurance agreements in five years.

Hospital and medical care payments cost the federal government $6 billion this year, up nearly 20 per cent from last year.

The announcement by Finance Minister John Turner in his budget follows numerous warnings about increasing costs for the programs shared by federal and provincial governments.

Turner said the government will limit the increase in its net contributions to provincial medical aid programs to 13 per cent next year, 10.5 per cent in 1977-78 and 8.5 per cent thereafter.

While Ottawa and the provinces have been talking for several years about changing hospital insurance arrangements, the government's announcement of ceilings on increased medicare contributions to the provinces was not expected.

The federal government appeared to be telling the provinces that if they can't keep medicare costs down, they will have to foot more and more of the bill for the rising costs.

Turner said both programs, under which the federal government pays up to 50 per cent of provincial health and hospital costs meeting set minimum requirements, have long since met their basic objective of providing comprehensive health care.

Turner said the net ceiling next year of 13 per cent in growth of federal medical-aid contributions likely will reach 14.5 per cent when natural population increase is taken into account.

With an added population growth factor of 1.5 per cent, the gross ceilings would be reduced to a 12-per-cent increase in two years and 10 per cent by 1978, he said.
